Krishna Menon Loses Out As Indian Defense Official

NEW DELHI, India (AP)—Prime minister Nehru banished V. K. Krishna Menon completely from India's war-troubled government Wednesday.

Nehru told cheering members of his ruling Congress party he would accept Menon's offer to resign as minister of defense production—the step-down post he took a week ago after his ouster as minister of defense. Nehru thus bowed to a storm of protests against Menon's handling of defense preparations to meet Red Chinese border attacks.

Nehru acted just as he got an offer of a deal from the Communist Chinese to settle the undeclared war swirling on two points of India's Himalayan border. An Indian spokesman said, however, the Chinese were building up their forces in the two areas, apparently for new attacks.

The Peiping offer in effect was to trade a Chinese pullback to 2½ miles north of the McMahon line in the northeast in return for India's handing over Ladakh in the west.

Menon's demotion to the defense production post was not enough to satisfy the government party critics who argued that it left Menon in a position that would endanger the nation's confidence in the struggle against Red China.
