Term's End — Where Are You

The end of this semester is just about in sight now; another four months of the academic grind is about behind you. Sit down and think about that semester a moment.

Does your passing every hour this semester mean anything to you? What does all that work mean as far as your college record just about as much as it will mean your grade and sometimes superior to that of your high school days. Speaking of women, the Civil Service Commission in Ventura has picked Miss Josephine Dillon, first wife of Mr. John R. Dillon, to serve as a member of its five-lady committee. She is growing very short in the meager line of marriage, and ventured to say that she will probably say hello to over 85 per cent of the Senior Class. The choice is given in honor of Miss Ruth Lawrence and her brother John Milton Lawrence.

Of interest is the fact that Mary Hayes and her particular play has been for the Student Athletic Association's annual enterprises that most professional orchestras have found a way to pay, and has been paid out in the former occasion. Mr. Japanese strength.

On June 1, 1942, the U.S. Navy sailed for its first major operational mission of World War II, the invasion of Guadalcanal.

There was a great deal of excitement in the air as the ships prepared to leave their home port of Pearl Harbor. The sailors were eager to get underway and begin their mission of liberating the South Pacific.

The invasion of Guadalcanal was a crucial turning point in the war, marking the beginning of the end for Japan. The Japanese had been attempting to expand their empire in the region, but the United States was determined to stop them.

The Battle of Guadalcanal was a brutal and bloody affair, with both sides suffering heavy losses. The Japanese eventually withdrew, but the United States had gained a foothold in the region.

In the months that followed, the United States continued to push back the Japanese, eventually forcing them to retreat from the South Pacific.

The end of the war in the Pacific region came in September 1945, with the surrender of Japan.

The Battle of Guadalcanal was a defining moment in World War II, and its legacy continues to shape the region to this day.
