It all sounds real pretty and is probably true, but most people can't see it that way. Can't see the forest for the trees, to coin a phrase.

Everybody-school student, college student, parent, or just plain citizen-is too close to the school to see clearly its ideological functions.

To most people, the school house is right up on it. around the corner, and whether its shaped like yesterday's barn or tomorrow's flying saucer, it is as much a part of their neighborhood as the fireplug on the corner.

It affects everything in their lives, and families with school-age children are liable to find their lives geared around it.

Parents casually send their children to a public school for 12 or more years, trusting giving, Christmas and Easter holidays start the school to take care of them for six hours a day and to teach them the "right" things.

The children accept the school with equal casualness; they complain about parts of it, and enjoy other parts.

o Whom It May Concorn,

Chrough Editors,-The Battalion: We, as "soldier boys" in the orps at A&M, have found that be qualified to speak of spirit, is imperative that one must have rst participated in the traditions our school. We have found any discrepancies in the argunents presented in the recent leters to The Battalion by several on-reg students - freshman in articular. It is our firm belief hat there has not been any "mud linging" at those non-regs who ave never been in the Corps. Cerinly one would not expect a vetran who has already served his ountry well or a physically handiapped student to participate in e Corps activities—unless they desire. Nor do we feel that re-Meds or men who have had drop out of the corps at the nd of two years of military traing should be included unless they to desire. But we feel that if we are to look at any present situation from the non-reg view point it is imperative that those persons. who never have participated in the Corps also consider our feelings. How many times have the non-reg authors of the recent did join and quit because you didnot have the "guts" to stick it out, whom we are referring to. It is a proven fact that many of you, instead of joinging in with the Corps, have turned your back on our traditions by such things
