Bowen Puts Economy In True Perspective

Expert Addresses SCONA Assembly

Dr. H. R. Bowen, president of Grinnell College in Iowa, put the problem of economic growth in the United States into perspective in an address to the student assembly of SCONA V last night in the Memorial Student Center Ballroom.

The economic expert, a former president of the American Finance Assn., told the gathering "it is important, even urgent, for us to continue to develop and expand our economy." However he warned economic growth should not be directed solely towards producing more goods for domestic private consumption or toward more leisure.

"There are other socially desirable and morally compelling areas for increased production, and every bit of increased output we can muster would be justifiable for these ends," Bowen said.

"At this very moment," Bowen went on, "when the so-called 'standard of living' is at an all-time high, we are experiencing unprecedented rates of mental disorder and juvenile delinquency. Life has become suffused with anxiety, tension, and meaninglessness."

Bowen said he was not opposed to the enjoyment of economic goods, but was merely uttering the warning that "further additions to our incomes will not automatically enhance the 'quality' of our lives.

Alternative opportunities open to Americans in increasing their productive power were mentioned by Bowen. They include: improvement of working conditions, education, and foreign investment.

The working conditions of the American people constituted one of the major factors in productivity, Bowen stated. "By working conditions, I refer to the health, safety, and pleasantness of the workplace; aesthetic features of the working environment; job security; social, recreation, and educational facilities or experiences connected with work; the character of jobs with reference to monotony, fatigue, interest, challenge, responsibility; human relations on the job and concern for the dignity of the individual

"In fact, part of our true national product consists of the whole tangible and intangible satisfactions and dissatisfactions people derive from participating in production. These things make up an important part of our true standard of life. What happens to people in their working hours is truly as important as what happens to them in their leisure hours," Bowen said.

Bowen described education as "our greatest national resource." "Because education helps shape

Range, Forestry Schedules Turkey Shoot Tomorrow

A turkey shoot, sponsored by the Range and Forestry Club will be held Saturday, Dec. 12, from 10 a. m. until dark, at M. L. (Slick Trigger) Smith's, located two miles south of College Station on Highway 6.

If the weather is bad, the meet will be held indoors and announced later.

There will be events for rifle, shotgun and pistol and .22 cal. rifles will be furnished. Shotguns and shells will also be furnished at the shoot.

Events for rifles will include an open sights contest where the entrees fire at a target from a distance of 50 yards. Ten men will fire at the same target and the man hitting nearest to the bull's eye wins a turkey.

For rifles with scopes, a similar contest is planned, except as well as being able to shoot at a target's bull's eye from 50 yards, he can also fire at a turkey's head from 125 yards. A shooter drawing blood from the live turkey wins it. With open sights, he can shoot at the same turkey's head from 80 yards, and the same rules for winning apply.

The ham string shoot is another event, designed for rifle and pistol shooters, where contestants shoot at a string from which a ham is suspended, at a distance of 30 feet. A $1 ticket will give an entree four shots, and if he breaks the string he wins the ham.

Shotgun shooters will have a chance to do some skeet shooting Saturday during the turkey shoot. In order to win a turkey in this event, the shooter must hit five of five. Another special feature for shotgun shooters will be firing at a clean target, and for every 10 shooters, the person with the most shot in his target wins a turkey.

Any gauge shotgun can be used in this event; however the Range and Forestry Club will furnish the shells.

The turkeys offered as prizes weigh between 18 and 21 pounds apiece, and are raised by the Department of Poultry Science.

Bonfire Talk Tops Business Of Civilian Student Council

A discussion of the Bonfire Week topped the business at the Civilian Student Council meeting last night in the Press Club Library, ground floor, YMCA.

Larry Clark, representative from Bizzell Hall, presented the Bonfire report to the members, saying it was successful. He commended Joe Leeper, head of this year's Bonfire Committee, for his work in making the Bonfire a success.

"There was an increase in civilian participation this year," Clark said. "The civilians took part in just about everything concerned with the building of the Bonfire." He especially commended Milner, Law and Bizzell Halls for playing a major roll in the production of the Bonfire.

Clark also pointed out the safety noted in this year's Bonfire. "It was the largest and safest," he said.

Ken Cox, Civilian Yell Leader who worked closely with civilian students in building the bonfire, said that the Corps noticed the civilian output. "The Corps appreciated the civilian work and thought it was valuable assistance," Cox said. "It was a step in bringing the Corps and civilians closer."

President Charles Graham encouraged everyone to take part in the event next year.

The Aggie Campus Chest drive, which ends today, was also discussed at the meeting. President Graham said he was not happy with the civilian contributions, saying that "somebody fell down on the job." He did say that those who did give should be commended.

The Civilian Weekend, which will be held next semester in the Spring, concluded the discussion. Heading the Civilian Weekend Committee is Clark, chairman, Mike Carlo and Jim Crouch.

Subcommittees have been appointed by Clark and they are Publicity, Lee Griggs, David Stoker, Ben Havard, John Garner, and Jim Tucker; Tickets, John Heber, Jim Lively and Ken Cox; Barbecue, Jim Beal, Jim Hall, Harold Putnam, Charles McClaren, and Jim Manly; and Dance, Ken Dorris, Paul Corder and Wilton Thompson. Russell Neisig is in charge of the invitations to the Corps of Cadets.

Before the meeting closed, it was pointed out that civilian students should have their pictures made for the Aggieland '60 not later than Dec. 17. They urged the students to check dormitory bulletin boards for the picture schedule.
