A&S Council Favors Code

Members present at the Arts and Sciences Council called meeting last night stood in favor of a further study on an honor code for the School of Arts and Sciences.

Whether to start the program campus-wide or within the school was the main topic of discussion. Some members thought the move should be started and would work only if the whole student body were behind the code. Another side said the idea could start in a nucleus of students such as the School of Arts and Sciences and spread into a campus-wide plan.

Dean of students James P. Hanningan said after the meeting that he thought the plan would work either way. He said, "I would prefer to see it school-wide and encompassing everyone. It should cover a conservative field and not everything a student does in his daily life."

The council is planning a panel discussion at its next regular meeting to discuss the matter further. They will invite Hanningan, Dean of Arts and Sciences, Frank W. R. Hubert, Professor of Air Science, Col. Charles E. Gregory and Walter A. Varvel, professor in the Department of Education and Psychology.

In addition, the group plans to invite the officers of the other schools to take part in the discussion.

Hubert said after the meeting that he thought the idea would require further study.

"A movement of this sort grows and evolves, taking time to mature," said Hubert.

In other business, the group chose their candidates for the Association of Former Students awards for outstanding classroom teaching and the professor outstanding student relations.

Legal Foundation Names Professor As Representative

Phillip E. Goode, College Station attorney, has been appointed a resident representative of the Southwestern Legal Foundation, according to an announcement by President Robert G. Storey.

The Legal Foundation, which shares headquarters with the Southern Methodist University School of Law in the Southwestern Legal Center, affords a program of continuing legal education for practicing lawyers.

Representing the Brazos County Bar Assn., Goode will serve to advise lawyers in his area of Foundation programs and submit recommendations concerning training programs desired.

Goode is professor of business law at A&M.

Racial Bars Fall At San Antonio

An unidentified Negro carries his tray at an integrated cafeteria in downtown San Antonio. The lifting of the ban on serving Negroes at a number of downtown lunch counters and eating places came after a delegation of Catholic and Protestant leaders met with businessmen. Earlier the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People had threatened sit-in at lunch counters unless segregation was ended. (AP Wirephoto)

Whiting and Pedigo Complete Lectures

Robert L. Whiting, head of the Department of Petroleum Engineering, and John R. Pedigo, associate professor, have just completed their twelfth series of lectures at the American Assn. of Oilwell Drilling Contractors' school of Drilling Technology in Odessa. They have been invited to lecture at the next session scheduled in October. The school is conducted by the University of Texas Petroleum Extension Service, utilizing the facilities of Odessa Junior College.

The A&M faculty members conducted approximately 50 hours of lectures in each session. Pedigo lectured on geology in relation to drilling, formation, evaluation, drill stem testing, electric logging, radio-active logging and well completion practices and techniques. Whiting dealt with drilling fluids and hydraulics as they pertain to drilling and completion.

More Than 500 . . .

The School of Drilling Technology is operated for the benefit of men engaged in the petroleum industry, primarily in the drilling of oil and gas wells. Since the beginning of the school more than 500 oil men have received train-

To Increase Funds More Spending Must for A&M

AUSTIN (AP)—A top education official told House investigators Saturday state colleges, including A&M, must increase their spending at least $31 million in the next two years.

Dr. Ralph Green, director of the Texas Commission on Higher Education, said the commission feels general agricultural training should be given at A&M, Texas Tech and Texas A&I and teachers colleges should restrict themselves to training programs for vocational agriculture teachers.

Avoid Duplication

Wesley Roberts of Lamesa, chairman of the House Committee on Saving Taxes, said the committee is interested in avoiding the duplication among colleges, commenting "You can't let everyone have his own little alligator farm."

Green told the Committee college enrollments are expected to double nationally in 10 years.

"But I'm a little bit skeptical that Texas enrollments will double."

The number of students will climb at least 7.3 per cent in the next biennium according to a Texas Research League study, Green said, and will continue to rise steadily as "war babies" reach college age.

Schools Must Carry

State schools must carry most of the increased load, he said, "Because the church supported schools have come up against the proposition that they can't take all the students they want. They've reached the point where if they raise tuition again they're pricing the students out."

Green described the commission as a coordinating body which can approve or disapprove addition of programs but has little control over operation of established programs.

Controls Need Strengthening
He said controls over spending, particularly on buildings, needs to be strengthened, but admitted he doesn't know what sort of agency should have the job.

"I am not one who would advocate setting up an all-powerful authority here in Austin," Green said.

The committee spent Friday investigating building programs at the state teachers colleges, especially the construction of $100,000 homes for college presidents.

Roberts said he hopes to sponsor a constitutional amendment requiring review of college construction programs.

Intramural Programs
Green's commission will repeat this year its recommendations of two years ago that tax money not be used to pay for intercollegiate or intramural athletic programs or health services.

Green told the committee the University of Texas, A&M and Texas Tech are the only colleges with athletic programs which pay their way.

Locals Urged To Register

Local people who are delegates to the formal inauguration Saturday, of President Earl Rudder are urged to register Friday March 25 from 1:30 to 7:30 p.m., in the Memorial Student Center.

"This is being requested in order to avoid delay in the registering of out of town delegates," Joe Woolket, general chairman for the inauguration, announced today.

The Class of '63 will elect a president, vice president, secretary-treasurer, MSC Council delegate and social secretary.

Both of the top students are due to graduate in June. Allen plans to enter Baylor Dental College in Dallas and Dryden will enter Baylor Medical College at Houston in September.
