SWC Action Questioned

Texas A&M felt the sting of Southwest Conference disciplinary action Saturday for the second time in 10 years.

And for the second time this decade, the Aggies face the grim possibility of winning the conference championship and not being allowed to represent the league not being allowed to represent the league in bowl competition. The SWC faculty committee found A&M guilty of violating the off-season practice rule and illegally depriving athletes of scholarships. Indefinite probation and re-moval of post-season bowl privileges were the propulsion the penalties.

The committee charged A&M with using physical education classes for scheduled football practice and for withdrawing aid from almost 70 students who quit the squad after Coach Gene Stallings took over as head coach in December, 1964. Stallings termed the former charge an insult to his integrity. It has been suggest-ed the only reason this charge was included was to bolster the SWC argument for so severely penalizing A&M. The charge apparently contains little merit. The class in question was Physical Education 317, Coaching of Football. Football shoes and footballs were issued in the class, which contained about 70 football players. "How can you have a football class without a football?" Stallings questioned. "The shoes are issued for protective measures.

Sound-Off

Editor. The Battalion:

I am writing this letter to the Fightin' Class of '69. We are the best class that Texas A&M will ever produce and we need the best representation possible. To assist the class president, we need someone who can fulfill the job of vice president.

I feel that the freshmen class is reliable enough to choose the best man for the office of vice president. This position is not only an honor but it also carries with it a year of hard work and responsibility. I am willing to sacrifice my time for the class to the best of my ability. On Thursday, I strongly urge each freshman to go to the polls and vote for the man of their choice. By all means turn out for the polls whether you are a cadet or a civilian and keep Harvey Cooper in consideration for the office of vice president. Harvey Cooper

Editor, The Battalion:

Allow me to thank you for putting me, fish "Old Army" Edwards, in the runoff for your fish class president. Space does not permit me to individually thank everyone, but I would like to cite the fish buddies in my outfit, and the corps and civilian freshmen who vigorously campaigned in my behalf.

If elected through your continued support, I will work to the best of my ability, for the best representation of all Fightin' Texas Aggie freshmen. My campaign platform is centered around the Fish Ball, which will be the best ever. To serve my fish buddies is my sole purpose in running for the responsible position of president of the Fightin' Texas Aggie Fish, Class of '69. Have a very Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year. Looking forward to seeing you at the polls this Thursday (same time and place) and also after the holidays.

A&M's football coaching staff did not actively participate in the class, except when asked by Emil Mamaliga of the physical education department, instructor of the course.

The 55 non-football players taking the class were issued full equipment for contact (for practical experience), but foot-ball players were held out of these drills.

ball players were held out of these drhis. Stallings said the course was approved by SWC executive secretary Howard Grubbs, but Grubbs refused to comment to sportswriters Saturday after the commit-tee had reprimanded A&M for "violation of the off-season practice rule." We agree with Stallings that the con-forence misinterpreted this rule.

ference misinterpreted this rule.

The second charge launched against the Aggies is the more serious, however, and has raised questions from several writers in the state press this week.

Stallings admitted that scholarships were withdrawn from players who voluntarily quit the A&M squad between the coaching change last December and the opening of football season this year.

This is, in fact, a violation of South-west Conference and National Collegiate Athletic Association rules that forbid an institution from withdawing financial aid from an athlete except for academic and disciplinary reasons. We do not questions A&M's violation of the rule, but rather interject various doubts about the rule's purpose, wording, enforcement and stringency.

While protecting colleges athletes from reckless rejection of aid by coaches, doesn't the regulation also discriminate against the athlete who remains out for the full season? If students who voluntarily leave the squad are entitled to full scholarship privileges, then what reward (other than personal satisfaction) is accorded the play-er who does not quit? Are athletic scholarships intended as a reward for outstanding high school performers or are they similar to on-campus jobs? If students may lose scholastic scholarships for grade deficiency, wouldn't the same argument apply for athletes who forfeit their athletic effeciency by voluntary resignation?

Is the world "disciplinary reasons" ambiguous in the rule? If an athlete fails to attend practice sessions, couldn't withdrawal of financial aid be interpreted as disciplinary action?

Is the regulation adequately enforced? Was Texas A&M sole violator of the rule or was this school in accord with the practices of other conference institutions? What happens at schools that recruit 52 players and have eight seniors four years later, or recruit 36 boys and end up with eight seniors, or have 10 of 31 recruits around after four years? Do all these football dropouts leave their respective colleges and universities? Do the ones who remain in school but give up football retain their financial aid?

Should violation of a questionable rule carry stiffer penalties than secret disregard for recruiting stipulations? Was the conference faculty committee discriminatory by slapping strong restrictions on A&M this year and SMU last year while offering only mild reprimands to Arkansas and Texas for illegal conduct?

Christmas really means, "Christ the gift to men, women, and children." To the English people we owe the word Christmas — Christ Mass — a religious ceremony celebrating the birth of Christ

Dec. 25 is the accepted date of the birth of Christ, as he was born at midnight on Christmas Eve.

Do you know why Santa Clause comes down the chimney at Christmas time instead of coming through the window? It is attributed to an old English custom of sweeping down the chimney at New Year so good luck could enter.

It is to the Hollanders that we owe the custom of hanging up our stockings. They placed their wooden shoes before the large fireplace, but we Americans substituted stockings because wooden shoes wouldn't stretch.

The holly leaves represented the thorns Christ wore upon the cross, while the little red berries were the drops of His blood. The giving of Christmas presents brings out the thought — "Peace on earth, good will toward men.

It was General W. E. Booth, founder of the Salvation Army, who was once asked the ques-tion if he were solicited to leave a message to the world, what would it be? He wrote only one word and signed his name. That word was 'others.

Happiness is not seeking pleasure for our-selves, but doing the necessary things for others. God grant me the power to accept things I cannot change; courage to change the things I can and wisdom to know the difference.

can and wisdom to know the difference. I think we should pause long enough to thank God for living in a Christian country. You know, I believe in prayer. My definition of prayer would be — communicating with God for that which we desire — not deserve. Across the editor's desk: -An Austin woman recently complimented the Corps of Cadets and A&M student body for its conduct at this year's Turkey Day game.

In a letter to Dean of Stu-dents James P. Hannigan, she said: 'Last year . . . I was highly critical of the conduct of the Corps during the game. I feel that I should now compliment them upon their splendid sportsmanship during this year's game at College Station.

"... I am a firm believer that sportsmanship as a phase of good citizenship is one of the crucial responsibilities of all athletic contests — intramural, intercollegiate and professional. May that always be an outcome of competition between these two schools of such prominence in the state and nation."

-Flu and chickenpox were the most numerous diseases floating around Brazos County last week. The county health department reported 62 cases of flu and 52 chickenpox sufferers. Next on the list were diarrhea (28), septic sore throat (17), mumps (13), gonorrhea (9) and pheumonia (7).
