Spending by military greatest in Sunbelt,
according to report

United Press International

LANSING, Mich. — Cities in the North and Midwest are the victims of an unequal pattern of federal military spending that favors the Sunbelt, a report by a Michigan State University professor says.

As a result of this unequal distribution of military spending, the federal government has been underwriting the recent flow of jobs and businesses from the North to the South and Southwest, said Michigan State University professor James R. Anderson.

Detroit suffered a net tax loss of $1.5 billion in military spending in fiscal 1977, the last year for which full data were available, he said Monday in releasing results of his study.

Of the nation's 40 largest cities, only New York and Chicago suffered a bigger military deficit than Detroit in that year.

In Michigan, the federal government collected $4.7 billion in 1977 and spent $1.7 billion on military projects, leaving a deficit of nearly $3 billion.

Anderson said the big winners from the Pentagon budget were Texas, Florida, California and the Washington, D.C. area. All received substantially more than they paid out in taxes to support the Pentagon.

"That warm, golden glow of the Sunbelt is being financed by sources generated in the Northeast and Midwest, to our economic peril," Anderson said.

"The federal government is acting as a conduit for shifting resources from one area to another."

He said he felt the inequality was inherent in the Pentagon budget. Anderson said slashing military spending across the board was the only way to lessen the economic burden on Michigan and other states with similar deficits.

Teng stays in Vietnam
despite U.S. urgings

United Press International

The United States told China Tuesday it should withdraw its invasion troops immediately from Vietnam. But Chinese Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping held firm, saying the Chinese action was necessary to halt Vietnamese "swashbuckling" in Southeast Asia.

U.S. Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal urged Chinese withdrawal in a 90-minute Peking meeting as intelligence sources reported an intensification of the fighting inside the embattled China-Vietnam border.

The Bangkok reports said Peking has moved up reinforcements and Vietnam was threatening to send its regulars into the line. Le Duan, head of the Vietnam Communist Party, ordered 3 million men and women to take two hours of military training a day.

Blumenthal, in Peking for a week of economic talks overshadowed by the war, said he told Teng that, "We oppose the solving of internal matters by means of force, by violation of national borders."

"I expressed the hope that you would withdraw as quickly as possible from Vietnam," Blumenthal said.

Blumenthal said Teng responded "to the treasury secretary's comments." He gave me a fuller answer which I have transmitted to the president."

But Vice Premier Teng, in a news conference, told American reporters, "this action is necessary" because Vietnam "swashbuckling" in Southeast Asia.

Teng also maintained that Chinese troops are doing well in the fighting. "I will just tell you one thing: the myth of invincibility of Vietnamese is no longer related," he said.

China has said it will not pull from Vietnam unless Vietnamese negotiate a cease-fire.
