Bush visits refugees in Sudan

Associated Press

KASSALA, Sudan — Vice President George Bush toured a camp of starving refugees Tuesday and appealed to the Ethiopian government to allow food to pass through rebel-held provinces.

Visiting the Wad Sheriffe refugee camp, Bush held a crying infant in his arms and helped feed another with a life-sustaining soybean milk formula. He witnessed first-hand the suffering of Africa's devastating famine. He called the experience "awesome."

"You can't help but see that you are deeply moved," Bush said.

Only a few miles of bleak desert stretching from the eastern Sudan oasis of Kassala constitute the six-year-old camp. It must support an estimated population of 70,000 refugees. Most of them are from the rebel-occupied provinces of Eritrea and Tigray.

As he has in the past, Bush accused the government of Ethiopia, President Mengistu Haile Mariam, of blocking food shipments to the rebel-held provinces.

"They ought to give a little," Bush said as he stood only a few miles from Ethiopia's border. "They ought to realize there is a great human tragedy here. I would appeal to Mengistu to do just that."

The rebels have proposed a truce on several occasions so that food can be brought to the millions of starving people in the north, but the Ethiopian government has rejected the idea. Thus most aid from Western groups has been transported into the rebel areas through neighboring Sudan.

Bush has said his trip to Africa would focus both on the famine that threatens an estimated 20 million Africans with starvation and on increasing farm productivity to prevent such tragedies in the future.

Bodies of U.S. drug agent,
Mexican pilot found in bags

Associated Press

MEXICO CITY — Two bodies found in plastic bags on a ranch Wednesday after a shootout were identified as those of a kidnapped U.S. drug agent and a Mexican pilot, the U.S. Embassy said.

Enrique Camarena Salazar, of the U.S. Drug Enforcement Agency, was abducted Feb. 7 in Guadalajara, and the pilot, Alfredo Zavala Avelar, was kidnapped on the same day.

Five people, including a Mexican federal policeman, were killed Saturday in a gunbattle between police and suspected drug traffickers at El Mareno ranch near the village of Vistahermosa, about 60 miles east of Guadalajara.

A search before dawn Wednesday turned up the bags containing the badly decomposed bodies, said a U.S. Embassy spokesman on condition of anonymity.

"We have a verification that they're our men," a spokesman for the embassy said at 4:30 p.m.

Mexicans and American officials worked on the identification process, according to the embassy.

Unconfirmed reports said that the victims' hands and feet were bound. Camarena, from Calexico, Calif., was abducted within sight of the U.S. Consulate in Guadalajara, Mexico's second-largest city, 332 miles northwest of the capital.

Zavala Avelar, a Mexican Agriculture Department pilot working with the anti-drug authorities, also disappeared in Guadalajara.

Mexico City's major newspaper, Excelsior, on Wednesday quoted sources in the attorney general's office as saying the bodies were found buried.

The kidnappings brought new attention to the problem of narcotics trafficking in Mexico and caused friction in U.S.-Mexican relations when extra searches of vehicles crossing the U.S. border were begun last month.

The border searches have been lifted and a handful of smaller border stations were closed again this week after anonymous death threats were received by the U.S. Customs Service.

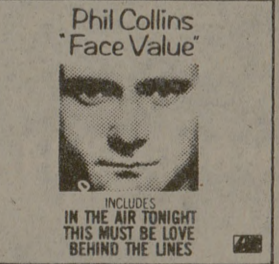

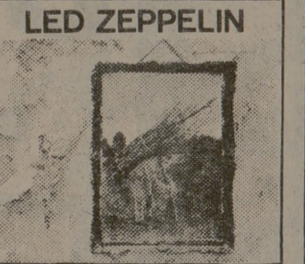

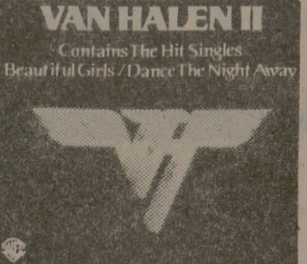

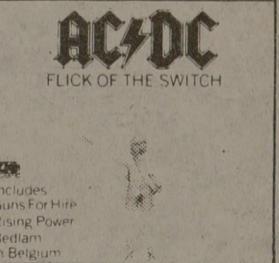

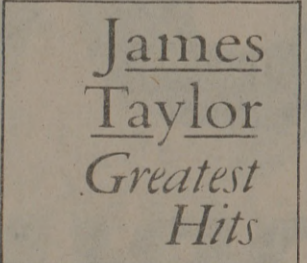

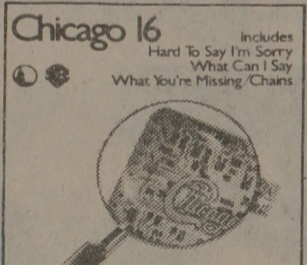

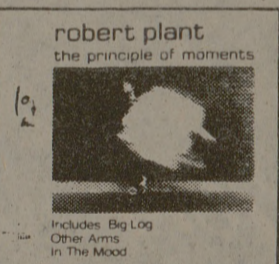

Five people were arrested after Saturday's shootout, according to a report from the attorney general's office. Federal agents arrived at the ranch as part of the investigation of the area around Guadalajara for Camarena, the report said.
