

Doug and Shannon lounge on Rudder Beach. Life doesn't get much

A guide to the ultimate

I have decided to compose a tour guide of the Texas A&M campus for those who were staying here over Spring Break with nothing to do — something no one has ever dared. This guide could be the ticket to the fun that few people realize awaits them. What a wealth of entertainment dwells here! A proverbial fountain of fun just waiting to be explored!

For those of you who have just raided your freezer for the last of the Girl Scout Cookies while sitting at home dreaming of the snow-capped Rocky Mountains, the first part of this tour is for you. Don't put your ski equipment up yet! There's one mountain that you've yet to conquer — Mt. Aggie. Don't laugh. This treacherous slope is a black diamond on any skier's map. Why do you think those haystacks are at the bottom? Yea, what slopes have you seen in Colorado with haystacks lining the bottom? I rest my case. Mt. Aggie looms over the south end of campus as an earthly challenge for all who dare.

After a hard day on the slopes, what could be more relaxing than a dip in a pool? Pepperdine has nothing on us. Mountains on one side and the tropical Rudder Fountain on the other. Slip out of your favorite ski bibs and into your string bikini. Rudder Beach beacons the most savage of all tanners. The cement ledge offers optimum tanning benefits to even the palest of scholars. Don't waste your money at the local tanning bed boutiques! Rudder Beach provides maximum solar rays. The sparkling waters rippling against the tanning ledge of Rudder Beach flow from natural springs. This water is not deep because it is so precious, so bring your dog along so he can enjoy this opportunity to bask in nature's glory.

After such physical exertion, a body becomes ravenous. That's no problem at the Snack Bar a la TAMU. Hot dogs, popcorn, day-

When it's too darn hot, they take a dip in the surf. High tide isn't really
