Lifeguard tryouts held in Galveston

The Galveston County Sheriff Department is holding lifeguard tryouts at 715 Holiday Drive on Galveston Island. The tryouts begin at 9 a.m. on March 10. To be considered, interested applicants must be at least 17-years-old and be able to swim 500 meters in under 10 minutes, 50 meters in 35 seconds or less and complete a 25 meter underwater swim. Personal interviews will also be a factor. For applications, call (409) 766-2310.

Duchesses needed for Cotton Pageant

Applications are now available for duchesses to the 51st Annual Cotton Pageant. Any campus organization is invited to enter a contestant, as well as sororities and fraternities. The winner receives a $500 scholarship to TAMU. Entry fee is $40. The pageant will be held March 29 and 30. For applications and information, call Patrice at 764-7133.

Apollo

Missions flight director
to speak here today

By ROD RICHARDSON

Reporter

Gerald D. Griffin, director of the Johnson Space Center in Houston, will be the featured speaker at the Junior Engineering Technical Society conference here today.

Griffin will speak at 3 p.m. in Rudder Auditorium.

Griffin, Class of '56, was flight director in Mission Control on all 11 Apollo space missions. He joined NASA in 1964, and has been director at the Houston space center since August 1982.

The former A&M student was lead flight director on Apollo missions 12, 15 and 17 and he served as flight controller on all the Gemini flights.

Griffin is expected to give a brief summary of U.S. manned space flights.

He is also expected to discuss the changing complexion of the space business and some of the new innovations and challenges in the space industry.

The Junior Engineering Technical Society was created to inform high school students, teachers and parents about the engineering profession.

During the conference, students will participate in competitive tests in English, mathematics, biology and engineering graphics.

Awards will be presented for winners of a technical paper contest, engineering design competition, the competitive tests and the best and largest Texas JETS chapters.

Other awards and scholarships will be presented to the 1,500 students expected to attend the closing ceremonies.

White denounces federal actions on drug smuggling

Associated Press

AUSTIN — The federal government must get tougher on Mexican border drug smugglers, Gov. Mark White said Thursday.

He said the use of military reconnaissance planes without adequate backup is like playing "expensive video games."

"I know of no invasion that's ever taken place in this country's history that has created so much turmoil, so much heartache, so much hardship and so much of a threat to our national security as the invasion of narcotics," White said.

"I think it's time for the national government to get about its job. We have the resources available; we've paid for those resources. They're called 'national defense.'"

White said the drug-related crime occurring in Mexico has spilled over into Texas.

"Many of the problems we face and the deaths that have occurred, the kidnappings that have occurred, are directly related to narcotics trafficking in this state and this nation," he said.

The governor downplayed Thursday's announcement in Washington that the military is using sophisticated AWACS — airborne radar — planes to detect aircraft carrying drugs into the United States.

Despite the use of AWACS, he said, equipment hasn't been made available to pursue smugglers who are spotted.

"You're putting a $100 million out there on the front line and you have no backup responsibility," White said.

"If we don't have the pursuit planes to follow up the aircraft they may detect through the use of that surveillance effort, in a sense we're playing very expensive video games."

"They can go up there and see the planes coming in, and yet we don't have any mechanism out there to go apprehend those planes."
