and theatre from Washington State University. He received a doctorate in dramatic arts from the University of California-Santa Barbara in 1974.

Herman has been provost and vice chancellor for academic affairs at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign since 1998. The school boasts his extensive science, mathematics and education policy experience on various advisory committees and his work to create government-university-industry partnerships for research.

He holds a bachelor's degree from the Stevens Institute of Technology and a doctorate in mathematics from the University of Maryland.

Gramm, a former economics professor at A&M, is retiring from the Senate this year and was widely rumored to want the University's top job. His wife, Wendy, currently serves on the A&M Board of Regents. Search committee members would not say whether Gramm had applied.

Dr. Jerry Gaston, a non-voting member of the committee and A&M system deputy chancellor, said the committee had a list of attributes to consider, including appreciation of the traditions of

A&M and someone who would continue reaching for the goals of Vision 2020.

None of the candidates are A&M alumni. A&M President Dr. Ray M. Bowen is only the fourth president in University history with a degree from A&M.

Sippial said candidates were nominated and applied for the position.

Herman will visit the A&M campus March 24-27; Whitmore will visit March 27-30 and Gates will visit April 1-4. Gaston said each interview is three days of meetings with A&M officials, student groups, community leaders and former students.

"They will be exposed to every level of membership of the University community," Gaston said. "The advisory committee will then solicit opinions from anyone who wants to give them."

After the interviews, the advisory committee will present final evaluations to A&M System Chancellor Dr. Howard Graves and the Board of Regents.

The selection committee was formed in July 2001 after Bowen announced his plan to retire June 30, 2002. A&M faculty, student body president, alumni and business executives with A&M ties serve on the committee.
