

indicates that the people there know a good thing when they find it; and also that they know where to get teachers when they need them. The professor (better known to us as plain "Att") will make his X mark, not like the foregoing, but high upon the walls of the temple that used to illustrate the first page of "The American Spelling Book, by Noah Webster, L. L. D."

Ernest Bruce, '94, is keeping books, after a year at the State University. When last seen by this writer he seemed a little "cranky" but he had no wheels in his head, on the contrary he was pedaling ahead on a bike down one of the thoroughfares of Dallas. "Bruce's address," is Mineola, Tex.

H. T. Coulter is at Bellvue Medical College, N. Y., learning how to do it scientifically.

W. L. Dazev is learning how to cut other people's teeth at the dental school of Vanderbilt University. Before going to school he put to good use one of his A. and M. College acquisitions by acting as draughtsman for one of the largest bridge-building firms in Texas. He is learning to do bridge-work now, but not such as "carry one safe" over anything worse than a tough stake.

Dr. B. V. Ellis, '92, has completed himself by taking a better half. I understand that Billy is very popular, not only as a physician, but also with his wife. He writes his prescriptions in Paris, Tex.

Harry Jordan, '95, and Gee Abbott, '94, are both at the State University.

Don't vote for any man for governor or the State legislature who thinks that parsimony and economy are synonymous terms, when the College asks for expansion to meet the demands upon her.

Mr. W. M. Wood, '88, is telling the people about the merits of the William's typewriter. He is general agent for Texas and adjoining territory. Dallas is his headquarters.

Messrs. E. W. Hutchinson, '89, and J. S. Radford, '90, are making a success of the grocery business in Houston,
