

Cornell University.

The class of '84 was represented by W. Wipprecht of Bryan and Prof. W. B. Philpott of College. The latter gentleman has undertaken for the summer months the editorship of the Gulf Messenger of San Antonio. That he may be highly successful in bringing this promising Texas magazine to the highest pitch of excellence is the wish of every alumnus.

A. M. Ferguson, '94, of Belton, is now entitled to write M.S. after his name, he having finished his graduate course here this year.

"Huck" Watkins, '95, of Del Rio, Texas, assured the Alumni editor that he would give every one of his red hairs, as much as he thought of them, and go through life bald-headed, if by doing so he would be enabled to attend commencement, but business engagements prevented. It was the same way with the rest of this class until a few days ago the youngest members of the association. They were wild to come, but their battle with the world is only in its first phase, and they could but few of them spare the time.

The members of this class that were present at the various meetings and the banquet which followed it were Law of Bryan, Bloor of Manor, Martin of Marlin, Hutson and Burgoon of College and Adams of Ennis.

P. P. Mills of Waco, once a member of this class came down to commencement and was hailed with delight by all of his old comrades, who insisted that he should consider himself their special guest of honor.

The new constitution adopted by the Alumni Association at this year's meeting was almost entirely the work of Prof. P. S. Tilson, '88, and it tells well for the care and pains he took in preparing it that it was adopted by the association as it was presented, and without a dissenting vote.

Frank Lewis is another C. E. of '94 that has served his country and himself well since graduation.

Appropriations were made for continuing the work of sectionalizing the lands in the Indian Territory, much to the pleasure of Mr. Lewis. Frank arrived on the campus Saturday evening with a fine, large moustache, but the boys borrowed a pair of scissors and away they went, to the displeasure of the hotel clerk.

E. L. Bruce came in late, but made up for lost time just as of old. Says he is working in the only bank in Mineola.

Rob Smither made himself known shortly after Monday's
