

the band is playing excellently, and bids fair to outstrip all other similar organizations.

Col. S. L. Blount is grasping the hands of his many friends before leaving for Philadelphia, where he will continue the study of veterinary science.

At a meeting of the Ross Volunteers the following officers were elected: A. J. Kyle, captain; W. F. Hutchinson, 1st Lieut.; H. Cotton, 2nd Lieut.; Cavitt, quartermaster; Newton, 1st sergeant; Barnes, Hubbard, Ragsdale, Martin, W. C., 2nd sergeants. New members well chosen, and judging from the enthusiasm of all, the company will keep up the reputation of being the crack military company of the south.

The College Yell.

Rah! Rah! Rah!
 Hi! Ho! Ha!
 A. M. C.
 Boom! Cis! Bah!
 College.

They Say

That Willis has nightmares.
 That Cotton chopped cordwood.
 That Preston goes to "right about, face."
 That the "fish" were glad to see the rain.
 That Eldridge is grieving for a lost love.
 That "Fatty" tried to blow out the electric light.
 That the "Big Four" are the hot tobasco sauce.
 That Hudgins was water-carrier for a C. E. corps.
 That Roberts sported his uniform among the ladies.
 That Whisenant talks of a corporalship in his sleep.
 That House wants to know the price of a corporalship.