

are very largely the product of the college. The attendance of the corps of cadets would be one of the best advertisements the college could have. In 1878 the corps attended the State Fair, where the behavior and conduct of the boys were such that the following session two new buildings had to be provided in order to accommodate the students then on the ground, and even after these additional quarters had been completed there was not room enough for those on the grounds, much less for all who desired to enter the college.

This occasion should be a grand time for the growth of the Alpha Phi fraternity, and it is to be hoped that our members in Houston have made arrangements to take advantage of it, for there is no gathering in the State where so many A. & M. boys show themselves as in the Texas Volunteer Guards, and that, too, away up in the front rank. Knowing Col. T. H. Eranklin and W. A. Childress to be interestrd in these matters, it is to be expected that each and every interest will receive its due share of consideration—especially the Alpha Phi fraternity.

Maj. R. P. W. Morris, formerly Professor of Applied Mathematics in the A. & M. College of Texas, and also one of the best commandants the college ever had, has recently been elected to congress from Minnesota, the state of his adoption. It was undr Major Morris that the corps of cadets attended the State Fair in '78, and where the battallion was adjudged the best drilled organization on the grounds.
