

played his man, but showed inexperience in not being able to guage his pass to the quarterback. With the exception of the pass Boettcher has played a better game at center than any man seen by the scribe this year. Cousins and Beall on the ends played hard, steady games, practically no gains being made around them. Gebheart played a good game at quarterback. When he overcomes his tendency to wait for the ball to be dead before he follows it, he will make Simpson move for the place. Schultz at left half gained more ground than any man on the team. He blocked the opposing end with the skill of a veteran and bucked the line like another Hare. Johnson played his usual brilliant game, always making his distance when called on. Brown at full back surpassed expectation. His enterference and bucking were good and he was always sure to return with the ball several yards after catching a punt. Each member of the team played football from the start and they all played together. They played a game worthy of a stranger adversary.

After the game, events crowded fast upon one another and there is not space to tell all that happened. First, was a ball at the best natatorium in the state. After the victory the Waco management thought we had enough and declined to pay for the baths, but the proprietors of the natatorium made up for this breach of contract and gave the boys the free use of the pool, tubs, and the whole establishment. He is a man and removed the feeling of disgust that was present when the fact was announced that no baths had been arranged for. After supper quite a number of the boys went to a reception at Baylor Uni-
