

versity. The invitation was fully appreciated and the boys were glad to meet a great many sympathizers among the students. Most of the members had something to do. How well we remember how Moseley played society; how Cousins collected his bet; how Beall gathered photos; how Boettcher enjoyed his red hat; the Thanksgiving dinner Astin did not eat; the engagement Baumgarten made; how being a corporal improved Kildow's playing; how Dwyer enjoyed being sent to bed at nine o'clock; how Johnson said nothing but sawed wood; how Gebheart got straight in bed; how we received permission to dine at Hearne on our return; how Schultz got his name changed. These incidents of the trip with many others, go to make up the charm of a college team's expedition and make all connected wish for another.

To Prof. Foster and Prof. Soule the team expresses its deepest gratitude. Their interest and help has been of great service and the spirit of the team was much improved by the hope that they would not disappoint their friends in the faculty. The student corps with some few exceptions has backed the team nobly and when all the cadets become loyal enough to meet a defeated team with sympathy and applause for honest effort instead of derision the true spirit will be found and a good team developed.
