

tra were enthroned "in chairs of gold on a tribunal of silver."

Cæsar shows his good generalship by leading Antony into a sea fight rather than a fight with land forces, where he did not have as much the advantage. As it was, Cæsar had trained sailors on his galleys, whereas Antony's mariners were not experienced.

Cæsar shows great respect for the queen of Egypt and offers her a good deal, but she heeds him not and takes her own life.

---

THE GAME OF BALL AT WACO.

The trip to Waco on Thanksgiving week was the most pleasant and successful one of the year. At the start on Wednesday the 23, all the arrangements had been made and the only cloud above the horizon was the fact that Simpson could not go. In his anxiety to win from Sherman he had made a sacrifice to Jupiter of his right leg's soundness, and consequently could not go. Besides this, all was lovely and at Waco enough sympathy was found to make things seem like home. A lot of young ladies at the hotel made the time pass pleasantly until bedtime and books and short walks filled the time in the morning before the game. Each member of the team showed his eagerness for the victory in the afternoon by saving his strength and activity for the game. So, very little of importance took place until the whistle blew for Add-Ran to kick the ball off in the afternoon. From the