

has the neatest cover of any of the exchanges we have received; but the cover was not the only pleasing thing about this magazine, for between its pretty covers was some especially good reading matter. We are always pleased to receive this magazine.

There are meters of accent,
And meters of tone;
But the best of all meters,
Is to meter alone.—Exchange.

“The Baylor Literary” is as good as usual this month. Although its articles are not long they are all well written. The story of the “Buried Plums,” by M. L. Moore, teaches us what effect one disobedience had on him. His story is cleverly told and I think we may all gain a valuable lesson from it. Let us hear from you again Mr. Moore.

Grandma—“What are you doing in the pantry, Tommy?”

Tommy—“Oh, I’m just putting away a few things.”
