

merciful tip foul hit him on the arm and he was compelled to withdraw from the game; Hammond took his place behind the bat. Our team played as follows: Storey, catcher; Baumgarten, pitcher; Clement, 1st base; Foster 2nd base; Davis, 3rd base; Beall, short-stop; Campbell, right-field; Darlington, center-field; Johnson left-field; Hammond, substitute. Cadet Jeffres umpired the game to the satisfaction of all. The game terminated in a victory for College, the score being 15 to 10, which was good news for the cadets who all extend congratulation to the team for upholding the good standing of the college.

Hike! Hike! Listen to our noise;
We are the A. & M. base ball boys.
College, College, is our cry,
V-I-C-T-O-R-Y.

Why prepare for business? Because the field of business will never be entirely occupied, and because the highest reward is offered for business ability. It calls for the best brain power of the nation and pays more for it than any other field of action. The requirements of modern business men are so complicated and exacting that a knowledge of business affairs is necessary to the success of anyone. Attend Hill's Business College.

A is for Astin so large and so fat,
B is for Brewer who would run from a rat.
