

We are glad to see our teachers so interested in our work and so willing to help us. We are also glad to see the boys show their appreciation of the Faculty's interest in them by applying themselves diligently to their studies and other duties.

It is with pride that we watch the improvements taking place on the campus. The new Barracks now going up will add greatly to the appearance of the College grounds and much to the comfort of the boys. We are glad to see work progressing fairly well and hope it will soon be finished. Also the professors' dwellings and the Bachelors' Hall are quite an improvement and help the looks of our campus very much. We are also glad to note that preparations are being made to begin work on the new Agricultural building. We are certainly in debt to the governor, the house of representatives and the senate of our state for their liberal contributions, and hope they will feel that we (the Corps of Cadets) appreciate their kindness beyond measure.

We heartily welcome the young ladies that have entered our school. Their presence certainly makes the time pass much faster and adds a vast amount of pleasure to our college days. We are hearty supporters of co-educational institutes, for man derives more good from the company of one refined lady than from any other source.

No worthier gift can man receive,
No grander vision can he see,
No greater joy can e'er be his
Than woman's fair nobility.

Sunny South Lassies.

I will sing you a song of a wonderful
land,
Where the wheelwoman doesn't exist,
Where the girl that you love is as childish and bland
As the girl that your grandfather kissed;
Where the bloomers don't bloom, and
the skirts don't divide,
And the maidens don't box and make bets—Oh, the girls of the South, we assure you with pride,
Don't talk slang and smoke cigarettes.

Its Etymology.

"I wonder how Chautauqua got its name," observed Mrs. Snoggs.
"It comes very naturally from the character of the place," replied Snoggs
"How is that?"
"Well, there's social conversation there and lectures and a lake."
"Still I don't see the connection."
"Don't you? It's a combination of chat and talk and aqua."
