

ALUMNI DEPARTMENT.

F. MARION LAW, '95, Editor.

H. L. HUTSON, '95, writes the Battalion that the Worthington Pump Company, of Brooklyn, with which he is working, has constantly on hand large orders for pumping machinery from sugar planters in Hawaii, and that there should be fine openings out there for graduates of both the Agricultural and Mechanical departments.

Prof. H. K. Orgain, an old A. and M. boy, is candidate for superintendent of public instruction in Bell County. Good luck to you, Henry.

"Pee Bunk" Bittle has resigned his position as Commandant of Cadets and Professor of Mathematics with the West Texas Military Institute, at Llano, to accept the position of Assistant under our efficient steward, Mr. Sbisa.

If you want to keep up with the college and the comings and goings of your old college chums, subscribe for the Battalion.

Robert E. Doyle, a popular second class man in the session of '89 and '90, paid the college a visit at the opening of the present term. He came down to enter a younger brother in college. Doyle says that he is sorry that he did not return and finish his course. He is now a wide-awake planter and general business man at Granbury.

The University has taken rank as one of the leading and most numerous attended universities in the south. The

A. and M. College has issued matriculation blanks to 442 students this session, and is the best and most numerous attended A. and M. College in the south. Texas is all right!

H. E. Rawlins, '98, formerly chief clerk to the commissary department of the United States Army, in Havana, is now with the Engineering department of the army. He is inspector of masonry and is at present engaged in securing stone to be used in paving the streets of Havana.

As a tree is judged by its fruit, so is a college judged by the prominence and achievements of its graduates and ex-students. Look over the Alumni catalogue and see what the A. and M. boys are doing. Every one of them are following an honorable occupation, and many of them hold positions of honor and trust in the commercial and professional world. That's not bad!

S. L. Blount, '95, recently wrote to a friend on the Campus announcing his departure for South Africa on a British transport, loaded with mules. He goes as a veterinarian. Look sharp, "Potsy," for the wiley Boers.

W. F. Hutchinson is with the American Cotton Company, Houston.

C. G. Robson, '98, is the customs inspector's office at Galveston.

We regret the fact that the hardware establishment of Barnes and Son, of
