

EXCHANGES

The Thanksgiving number of the Herald has been received, and we welcome it as a first-class college paper.

The November issue of the Baylor Literary contains a very humorous story of "My First Fishing Trip."

And while we are on the subject of trusts, there is the corset trust. That has undoubtedly come to "stay." And think of the people it has "squeezed!" It goes to "waist," but sometimes it is hard to get around it. In spite of the money behind it, it is generally on the verge of a "bust." But there is one thing that can be said about it—it is distinctly and at all times "anti-expansion."—St. Louis Republic.

Man was wont to say:

"Little drops of water,
Little grains of sand,
Make the mighty ocean
And the pleasant land."

Now he gets "educated" and says:

"Infinitesimal particles of saline humec-tive fluidity, Minute corpuscles of discrete non-adhering silicious matter Conjointly cause to exist the immeasurable expanse of hydrogen mon oxide
And the resplendent superficies of dry solidity."

"Clear out, now," commanded the housewife, "or I'll set the dog on you."

"He wouldn't hatch nothin', lady," shouted back the tramp; "I'm a bad egg."

The College Barometer has in the November number several fine photo-engravings of the College buildings.

Josh Billings says: "Laff every time you feel tickled, and laff once in awhile, anyhow."—Columbian.

The Tennessee Magazine is by far the best exchange on our list. The sketches by the Misses Wiley are worthy of Gibson himself, and add very materially to the value of the paper. The editor-in chief is a splendid writer, both of fiction and of poetry, and deserves much praise for the interest he takes in the paper.

"The classes will meet here to-morrow at 10 o'clock," was what the professor had written upon the board; but one of the students who arrived a little early erased the "c" and was much amused at the professor's peculiar look as he noted the change. "Two can play at that game," was the teacher's only remark, as he coolly erased the "1," to the general discomfiture of the students.

The Southwestern University Magazine would be greatly improved if a few sketches were inserted.
