

PROFESSOR JOHN A. CRAIG.

Professor John A. Craig, Dean of the Department of Agriculture at the A. & M. College, and Director of the Experiment Station at College Station, the subject of this sketch, was born in Ontario, Canada, in 1868.

He attended Ontario Agricultural College from 1885 till 1888, graduating with the degree of B. S. A.

One year after his graduation he became managing editor of the Canadian Live Stock and Farm Journal. After serving three years in this position, Professor Craig was elected Professor of Animal Husbandry in the University of Wisconsin, serving in this position till 1897. He resigned to engage in farming and stock raising at Rice Lake, Wisconsin. In 1898 Professor Craig was again chosen Professor of Animal Husbandry and Vice Director of Experiment Station at the University of Wisconsin, where he remained three years. He then became editor of the PIONEER Publications, The Iowa Homestead, Wisconsin Farmer and Kansas City Live Stock Indicator. Remaining in this position only a short time, he resigned on account of failing health, and came to Texas. Since coming to this state, has interested himself in farming, and especially live stock. He received the appointment to his present position last September.
