

atorium. This seems to be the universal opinion, not only of the Freshman class but of the corps as well. One of the English Professors requested his students to write a composition on the needed improvements at the College. Two-thirds of the compositions received were about the urgent need of a new Natatorium and the installment of a gymnasium.

THE CLASS OF '07.

Much has been said and written about the classes of '04, '05 and '06 and the things they are going to do, but as yet no one has undertaken to say anything for the class of '07.

When we first came here, one hot September day, far from home and friends, a feeling of longing for the old folks came over us, and discontent seized upon our souls. This soon changed to something else, however, when we saw what preparations had been made for our reception. Straps and paddles were in painful evidence; night came on all too soon, and with it—but let us pass over those horrors and speak of more cheerful things.

Time passed and we became better acquainted with our surroundings. Some of us took an interest in foot-ball, others in base-ball and other forms of athletics. Everywhere the Freshman has shown his prowess.

In our studies, too, we have prospered. A few may have succumbed to the daily grind, but this has been more from inclination than from lack of brains. Slowly we have worked
