THE WORST.

Of all sad words of tongue or pen, What became of Carter's cane-rush "ten?"

Or did we the seniors of a graft derive,

Or was it a ten, or was it a five?
—Uncle Fed.

Verses 18-27—A Question about the Resurrection.

Verses 38-40—Warnings against the Teachers of the Law.

Verses 41-44—The Widow's Offerings.

The battle came off, but my, it was tame

And the grafters all saw the results of their game;

And then to add to their utter chagrin,

Carter could not be found to dig up the "ten."

We see our pictures and postals galore,

Carter did it;

Likewise on cuts in Longhorns of yore

Carter did it.

But of all the doings that worry his cares,

Is the "cane-rush," which, worrying, bears,

Carter didn't did it.

It was thought, as his work always sings,

That Carter would fain do fool-hardy things;

So is it a joke or is it a fact,
Did Carter really offer a green-back?

Company Baseball.

The company baseball managers and captains have been elected for this season as follows: "A" Company manager, G. F. Moore; captain, Homeyer; "B" Company manager, Boyce; captain, Maxwell; "C" Company manager, Wootham; captain, Whitney; "D" Company manager, P. E. Cunningham; captain, A. J. Smith.

A great deal of interest is shown in the coming company games, and the members of the team are practicing, driving the stiffness from their arms and training their eyes for the benders. As yet, no schedule has been arranged. The regular games begin the last of March or the first of April.

At a meeting of the managers and captains of the company teams last week, a company baseball league was organized. W. G. Moore was elected president, the position of umpire being left open for a while.

At this meeting the officers of the company teams agreed with Capt. Smith of the first team, to observe the playing of their men closely. If any of the men show good form they will recommend the good players for practice with the squad. If after any men are found to be incapable of playing on the first team, if they have played a few games, they are not debarred from playing company ball. It was further agreed that those men who are asked by Capt. Smith and who refuse to join the squad, are not to be permitted to join a company team.

Besides the ordinary drugs and sundries, he will carry a very complete line of athletic goods, and is anxious to serve every A. and M. needs for such things. His display ad. will be seen in this number of the Battalion. Mr. Cavitt is a loyal College man and has many friends both here and elsewhere among the alumni. We wish him every success.

Accidentally a student found one of "fish" Tucker's letters, written to a lady friend whose name he had gotten from a class mate's letter. In the early part of this letter Mr. Tucker gives a flattering description of himself, dwelling at some length on his golden hair, and ends with this rash departure from facts, "don't think me vain but some call me handsome."
