

A. & M. 2; ST. EDWARD'S 0.

St. Edward's College of Austin has a cracking good ball team and played a strong game Friday against A. & M. College. To a great extent it was a pitchers' battle, but enough balls went across the infield to give the players work and to show that both teams were tuned up for fast, peppery work. Honors were even between Moore and Taylor on strikeouts, getting eight men each. In the matter of hits, however, the Farmers got two off Taylor, while the visitors scored but one on Moore, but each of the three hits of the game was a clean one. There were few bobbles during the game. Both teams put up a good article of ball. Except for the two scores crossing the plate in the sixth for the Farmers, it was almost a one, two, three and out game. In the sixth Puckett was first up and put a safe one over second; Moore tried an infield bunt to move him down to the keystone, and Taylor tossed it over to second, and of carelessly, and carelessness always goes wild. Puckett went to third and Moore to second. Then Puckett scored on a passed ball. Moore tried to steal home, and Cruz started him back by feinting and throwing to third, but in the throw he hit Moore back of the head with the ball; it rolled wild and Moore was across the plate before the ball was recovered.

THE SECOND FLOOD.

Last Sunday night between 8 and 9 o'clock there was a startling crash somewhere on the campus, which aroused everyone and sent them to the windows to see if either old Bat Roost or the M. E. Building had crumbled at last to earth. However, it turned out to be only the large storage tank over behind the steam plant which had collapsed, and in doing so injured one man and caused considerable damage.

This tank was 12 feet in diameter, 14 feet high, and had a capacity of 5000 gallons. At the time of the collapse the tank contained about 3000 gallons of water. The pressure of the water made a break in a weak seam and in a twinkling the whole tank ripped apart and came crashing to the ground. In going down it carried with it one end of a frame addition that had been built to the laundry. R. Elkins, employed by the laundry as a marker, was in the building at the time the crash came and was badly cut about the face and bruised about the shoulder by falling boards and timbers. His injuries are not very serious, however.

The tank contained all the available drinking water supply of the college and the unsavory sulphur water had to be used until pumps could be connected to the good water.

THE HAZING QUESTION.

Three years ago last September the members of the present Junior Class stepped off the train among a crowd of whooping "old" boys and began to feel for the first time the sense of some unknown disaster about to befall them. This was before any great effort had been made to put down hazing, and our expectations of a strenuous time were fully realized. We soon became accomplished baggage smashers, singers, dancers and speakers. The fancy opinions we had built up of ourselves as college boys, before leaving home, were rudely destroyed. We began to realize that we were only insignificant "Fish," and that for a year we had lost the privileges that we had enjoyed at high school. We heartily disliked the more active of the old boys, little realizing that they would be our best friends in the years of college life to follow. We were told how much worse hazing had been formerly and we fortified ourselves with the thought that if the "Fish" of those times could stand theirs we could surely stand ours.

Time wore on and we became Sophomores. As the new "Fish" began to arrive on the campus we saw how badly we needed what we had received, and perhaps more, but we had resolved to begin the stamping out of the more extreme forms of hazing and contented ourselves with teaching them a few necessary lessons and telling them what we had endured.

Now we gaze back into the misty past and recall with a sort of pleasure the track meets, kangaroo courts and Sunday schools we involuntarily attended.

As we view the present Freshman Class we wonder how we could have been so meek, and what influences made us so obliging. We see them taking privileges that we did not attain until our Sophomore year, and we realize that the abolishment of hazing is responsible for it. Hazing in its milder forms that makes the Freshman see his true position and not try to take privileges that belong to the upper classmen only, is the kind of hazing we do not wish to see entirely wiped out. When the time arrives that the Freshman will share all privileges with the upper classmen the present state of good will between them will be destroyed and college life will be robbed of one of its oldest and dearest characteristics.

NEW PRESIDENT OF THE BOARD HERE.

Familiarizes Himself with All Departments—Has Cadet Officers as Guests at Dinner.

W. A. Trenckmann, president of the board of directors of the college, was a visitor to the campus last week.

President Trenckmann made this visit to the campus in order to inform himself of the conditions as they exist. He visited classrooms, called on the head of each department, asked questions, and in every way informed himself so that he could act intelligently on the affairs of this institution. It was gratifying to all of the college people and cadets to have him visit the college.

Friday he had Herbert M. Pool, H. J. Kelly and C. H. Forsgard as guests at dinner and with them talked over the affairs of the cadets. Saturday before leaving he dined with Col. R. T. Milner, president.

Mr. Trenckmann graduated here in 1878. He is publisher of the leading German newspaper of Texas now, the Wachenblatt of Austin. His son, R. Trenckmann, who graduated here in 1907 in the mechanical engineering course, was the first son of a graduate to finish at the college.

NEW POSTMASTER.

Mr. R. R. Royall has been appointed postmaster at College Station and now has charge of all the campus mail matter.

Mr. Royall has served as assistant postmaster for the past twenty-five years and is fully qualified to hold this position. There has long been need of better service in handling mail matter, and it is to be hoped that this step will insure prompt and careful distribution.

WAIST AND ARMS.

A mathematics professor says that he has discovered that woman's waist is increasing in circumference. Soon some other learned man will be making the discovery that man's arm is growing in length.
