

LOCALS

Mr. J. N. Michie left Thursday for Virginia to attend the bedside of his mother.

It is reported on good authority that Lindy strapped the fish that rescued the big ram book.

We are indeed glad to see the two new swings in Saunders Park, the gift of Pete Saunders.

Miss Vesta Otto left Monday for Houston, after an extended visit at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Carson.

Mr. W. T. Atkinson, graduate C. E. '10, and "Red" Easterwood, who was a Junior when '12 class were fish, were visiting here this week.

R. E. Dickson has discovered why they wash the building stones in acid. He says it is done to remove tobacco stains.

A feature of the fire was the breaking out of all the window lights after it was clear that the building was doomed. This was done by the cadets in order to get full value of the trust fund.

Advisory System at Cornell.

The faculty of the College of Arts and Sciences at Cornell University has adopted a system of advisers for underclassmen. For some years there has been in operation a system of upperclass advisers, which provided that at the beginning of the Junior year students must choose as an adviser a professor or assistant professors to take the major portion of his upperclass work. The new plan has been originated in response to the belief that it would be advisable to give more systematic assistance to Freshmen and Sophomores in such matters as choice of studies and arrangement of courses.

Hereafter every underclassman must choose, or will have assigned to him, some member of the faculty to whom he may go for advice in the selection of his studies. It is the duty of the adviser to establish friendly relations with the students in his charge and make them feel that he will be glad to confer with them on other subjects than the choice of studies. And, as with the present system of upperclass advisers, the underclassman's study card must be approved and signed by his adviser before it will be accepted at the dean's office. No one adviser will have more than ten underclassmen under his charge.—New York Evening Post.

"Who pulled the cover off my bed?"
Good Eye shrieked aloud.
"I'll get that slimy creature yet,
If I have to lick the crowd.

With Koimn for a second
And Preacher now in view,
He decided to give him battle
Without any more ado.

He said unto his second:
"I'll set this matter right,
Or become upon my downfall
The horrors of the fight."

Preacher fought with manly skill
His great antagonist,
First with argument in vain,
And then with doubled fist.

Though Good Eye fought with valor,
We're sorry to relate,
In the midst of the encounter
He forgot to concentrate.

He left a tiny opening
Which Preacher chanced to spy,
As he hit him with a liner

In the corner of his eye.

The act so riled our hero
That he punched at Preacher's nose,
And made the blood gush torrents
Down the linings of his clothes.

The second called the battle off
With neither side ahead,
And the question still unsettled:
"Who tore up Good Eye's bed?"

L'AMOUR D'ARGENT.

She loved me, that I knew.
She only waited for a chance
To answer yes to my request;
My love for her could not enhance,
Ergo I did my level best
To start myself anew.

But time has brought to bear
A change in me but not in her.
I love her now with sudden zeal,
And nuptial tie will soon occur;
For now, I get a handsome deal—
She is a millionaire.
