TRADITION REVIVED BY CADETS' SNAKE DANCE.

Farmer Rooters Cirled Around the Field at West End Park Between Halves.

During the twenty minutes intermission between the first and second halves of the game with the Sooners Monday the A. and M. cadets revived the old tradition of the Farmer-Longhorn game by having a snake dance between the halves to celebrate the victory. Since time immemorial the cadets have held the snake dance at the annual clash with Varsity—to gloat over victory or cheer the team in defeat. Until the last two seasons of strained relations induced the No-Tsu-Oh authorities to forbid the snake dance for fear it might lead to hostilities on the field, the snake dance always took place between the halves. This year, with a different opponent, the rooters decided to automatically remove the ban, and with the glamor of a 7 to 6 score at that time to cheer them on, swept across the field in a mad column of exultant blue. The police reserves on hand were considerably irate, but the whole thing was done in a spirit of fun and merely to return to an old tradition at a time when it could do no harm. After the snake dance was finished the whole corps congregated in one mass and some sang "A. and M. Is Doing It" while others danced the "Turkey Trot." The few minutes' intermission was the occasion for great rejoicing for the cadet corps.

THIRD LYCEUM NUMBER.

Victorian Serenaders Entertained on Thursday, November 7.

The Victorian Serenaders, who entertained a large house last Thursday night in the chapel, was the second number of the Lyceum course. The troupe consisted of two women and two men and their songs, solos, and readings were very entertaining.

The manner in which the performer played the harp was worthy of especial mention. This instrument, once so common in cultured homes, has almost disapeared, and it was well worth one's while to witness this part of the performance. Another worthy piece was a monologue entitled, "The Girl Behind the Ribbon Counter," which was a realistic piece of acting.
