THE NEW BAT BOX.

The editors of The Battalion wish to call the attention of the professors and cadets to the new Battalion Box recently installed at the entrance to the Exchange Store, into which everyone is invited to drop write-ups of all events of general interest to the cadets, campus people or alumni.

The old legend printed each week on the front page says that The Battalion is printed by the Students' Association, whereas in reality it is usually written by one or two students while the rest of the corps stands around and tells how to do it. We hope that the students will do something to make this old legend mean something—mean that it is actually published by the student body.

Sign your name to your manuscript in order that the editors will not have to wire a detective in case they want another contribution. It seems that out of this large student body there should be a sufficient number to write up all the news.

A. and M. cadets have always been noted for possessing a large amount of college spirit for supporting their college activities. Yet there are always some who hold back and thereby cause the whole corps to suffer. Due to those who failed to come up with their part on the final ball last year, the financial committee ran short of funds and was forced to borrow money to successfully finance the ball. It is up to us old boys, therefore, to get together and pay off that debt. All captains have been requested to take up collections for this purpose, but the results were not what they should have been. Those who have paid we admire. Those who have not done so should by all means do so at once. Let's not lag behind always, but come up with our part. The senior class needs the support of every old boy in this matter. Make it a point to be prompt in the future, and such things will not happen again.

The affair of the car breaking down last Saturday with the senior dancers might be overlooked if such occurrences had not been so frequent in the past, causing as much, and sometimes more, inconvenience than in the case at hand. The Bryan-College interurban is a common carrier and exists for public service just as any other public service corporation. In order to hold its charter the management must live up to certain requirements and regulations, but there are other things which they may or may not do, as suits them best. It is to these things that the wide-awake public official will direct his attention and see that the people get what is coming to them. Why not tighten up on the interurban people and give the people of College and Bryan an efficient and dependable car service between the two places?

AGRICULTURAL SCRAPS.

Professor C. N. Kennedy of the Animal Husbandry department, was in Yorktown last week acting as official judge of livestock at the county fair.

Dean E. J. Kyle is away on a trip to Austin, Fort Worth and Pecos, where he will lecture on "The Development and Needs of Agricultural Teaching in Our Public Schools."

Prof. C. M. Evans of the Extension department is visiting at Van Alstyne, where he will join Director Youngblood and together they will attend the farmers' institute being held there.
