

HOUSTON PASTOR COMPLIMENTS CORPS.

The following clipping is an extract taken from the "Parish Bulletin" which is published by the Christ Church of Houston, of which Rev. Peter Gray Sears, who recently addressed the corps in Chapel, is rector.

It is an interesting experience for a preacher to face a congregation composed for the most part of 900 young men, bright, keen, clear-eyed, strong and vigorous, bubbling over with vitality and energy, and alert to hear what the preacher has to say to them.

And woe to the preacher if he does not say it straight and say it quick! They give him a fair chance; but "business must proceed promptly." There is no patience with what they call "reading the minutes of previous meetings;" an imposition upon their distinctly limited supply of patience calls forth unmistakable recognition and expression. The thoughts and ways of a body of young men at college in enforced attendance upon a public religious service make an interesting study, and one that would be altogether profitable to preachers generally.

The moral and religious life among the Cadets at the College, so the Y. M. C. A. secretary reports, was never better than at present. There is a fine spirit among them; and the moral sentiment of the corps is distinctively high. Certainly the Rector of Christ Church found it so on the occasion of his recent visit.

And this is true in spite of the fact that the Legislature of the State of Texas is bringing to bear upon these Cadets about the most irreligious influence they could be subjected to; and in this way, viz., by providing a building, a so-called Chapel, which stands for the outward and visible expression of faith in religion, which as a matter of simple fact is a wretched, worn-out, old, tumbled-down shack that has had to be bolted and anchored together to keep it from falling down; the building is hardly fit for a decent horse-stable, much less a house in which to offer up worship to Almighty God.
