

Morse Code

Practice with the dots and dashes were the mainstays of Signal Corps military training in 1917. Study during this time was under pressure because of the war in Europe and as usual A&M graduates were very much in demand in military circles.

Retreat

Retreat formations were held on Military Walk before marching into Sbis Hall for the evening meal in 1917. Building on the left is the Old Chapel which was in the place of the present Hart Hall.

Saber Drill

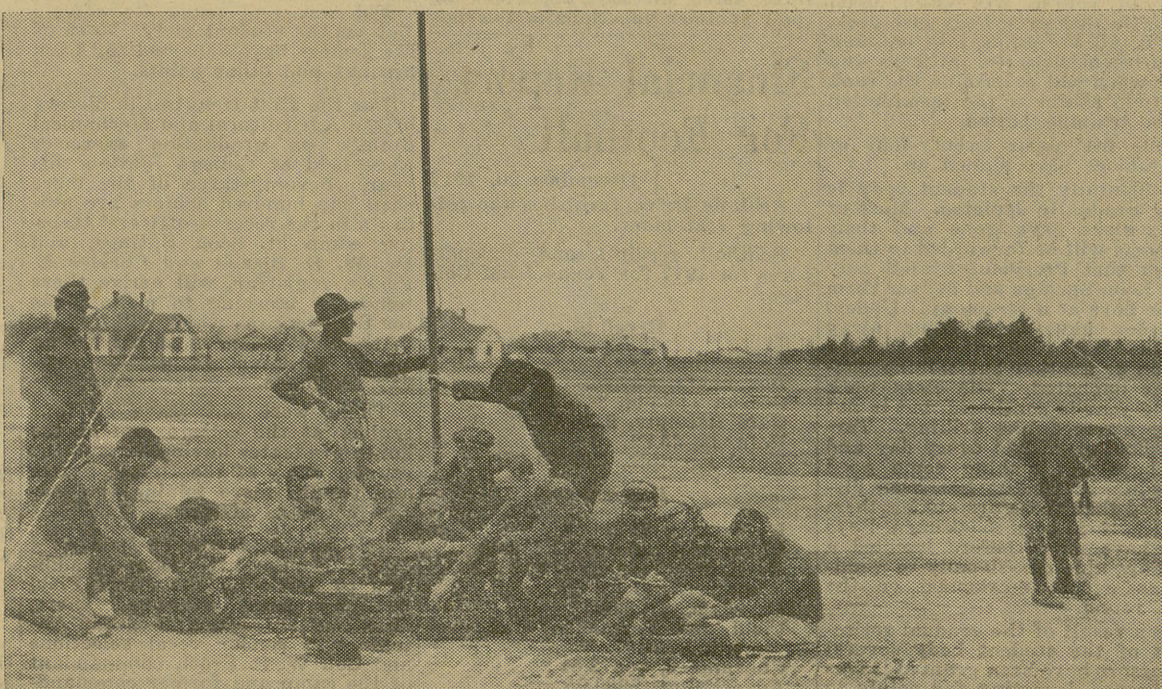

Officers in the Corps in 1917 go through Saber Drill on the main drill field. During this period the officers carried the regular heavy duty cavalry sword.

A&M 1917-18

Cadets pitch tents for practice in 1917. Housing was not the problem, the Military Department was conducting one of their corps wide classes.

Members of the Signal Corps put up "wireless" apparatus on the drill field. Houses in the background are along Quality Row, the old name of the faculty's housing area.

Files of horses perform a right turn during the drill period in 1917. The Horse Cavalry was done away with at A&M at the time of World War II.

A&M's 75th YEAR OUR 25th YEAR in BRYAN

Parallels ... Twin lines of ascent in reputation for quality and integrity ... Each organization serving the American people to the best of its abilities, each striving toward bettering that service.
