

A. and M. within the last few years were in the stands, and led by the cadet band, they gave the Aggies enthusiastic and vigorous support. About a thousand Cuero people saw the game, and rooted vociferously for their fellow-townsmen, Dunny McMurray, Farmer tackle. Dunny satisfied them, for he played an excellent game in the line, and time after time when called back he would plunge the Louisiana line for substantial gains.

Jack McClintock suffered a sprained ankle in the first quarter and had to be carried from the field. Dr. Blackwell is of the opinion, however, that the speedy half will be able to play in the Baylor game, which is on November 10. Several other men came back badly battered up. Anderson will be out of the Tulane game with a bad leg, Ford also received a badly battered leg, and Williamson was injured in the side. The whole team shows the effects of a hard game, and tender spots are innumerable.

What Coach Bible will do in the Tulane game with McClintock out is hard to say. Collins and Mahan are sure to be in, with either Fabian, Elam, Weir, Garth, or Higginbotham in the other two backfield places. Higginbotham showed up mighty well at San Antonio, and it is probable that he and Elam will start. Gilmore will be in at center.

ONE MORE JOKE REVEALS HIMSELF

Late Crop of Nuts Not Yet Exhausted. Regimental Color Corporal Congratulated by the Corps.

The fish class this year is due the thanks of the school for their brilliant contributions to the mirth of the corps. Their second contribution to the school Curiosities, Sports and Abnormalities, furnished for a time a better Oh-stop-tickling show than is generally witnessed by paying money to the child of Israel at the Majestic ticket window.

Some of his own classmates, tiring of the unaccustomed monotony of life in barracks, and probably spotting in his features the sure sign of the graduate of the Home for Backward Children, carried to him the news of his appointment to the post of Regimental Color Corporal. At first he met the information with the modesty of the blushing young thing not willing to expose his full value to the world at one swoop, slowly the innate power of the man asserted itself, and with the true manner of the one born to rule, he thanked the bearers of the welcome message, and immediately sat down to write the folks at home the wonderful news. He was truthful, but not exaggerative, and merely said that he had been accorded the "highest honor a freshman can have."

Next came the chevrons. He strode with the dignity becoming a high-ranking officer over to the Exchange store, and majestically demanded the arm decorations of a Regimental Color Corporal. Mr. Cheat'em must have smelled a rodent, for he supplied the boy with a handsome black chevrons to go on his sleeve, and no time was lost in attaching them firmly.

The first meal tried the true temper of the man. Showing his acquaintance with the customs of the school, he took his place at the regimental staff table, without more comment than necessary, and ate calmly through the meal, the only interruption coming in the form of a call for all staff officers to the table of the Colonel.

After dinner our weak minded young hero received the congratulations of his friends, and of many of the corps who had not known him before, but were attracted from afar by this interesting phenomenon.
