THE RECENT REORGANIZATION

The third term will see the beginning of several new organizations. The campus scenery in the near future promises to have the earmarks of a moving picture. Horses with trailing gun carriages will go galloping madly down the field, but still the gunner will sit cool and dignified with a poker in his back. The Signal Corps will man its buzzers and buzz away with a look of great concentration on their faces as if they knew what they were doing. Then the student in citizens clothes, or modifications thereof, will make his first permanent appearance. For the remainder of the session at least there ought to be no lag in the interest of strange sights to be seen on the campus.

From another point of view, the establishing of these units at the college shows that this country does not mean to be caught unprepared in the war game again. It shows just what is thought of this college and its students. The government is not so desirous of giving a great deal and getting nothing back. It surely must have confidence that A. and M. Cadets have brains enough to make good signal men and artillerymen. Furthermore, when few schools are getting so many units as this, this school must not be so bad after all. Most of the cadets here are unable to judge just what this school is for their experience is limited to A. and M., but when the cold, business, unprejudiced mind of the Government can give us such precedent, isn't it worth thinking about?

THE RECENTLY GRANTED PRIVILEGES.

It was with very great joy that these privileges were received by the cadets. At the very beginning, however, every cadet ought to get himself straight as to the relation between himself and this glimpse of freedom as he may term it.

These liberties are being extended to the student body with the belief that it is in a position to fully enjoy them and yet not take advantage of them. From indications, the time was indeed ripe for such a little stimulant to the student morale. In the opening of this field which promises untold possibilities, it is no time to get at all like the Jew who wants more the more he gets. If a cadet prides himself upon his sense of justice and is always raving about the injustices suffered by his fellow man, this is the very time to show it. Each man is placed upon his own responsibility. Until he gets to the stage that he can be trusted in this respect, he has to be treated like a moral irresponsible. The cadets ought not to go and act as if they were such things. Furthermore, they would throw away the opportunity of getting the things which have been dangling just beyond their grasp for the last 40 years or so.
