JUNIORS—
"CIGARETTES."

When you're waiting in the morning,
In that grimy loatsome trench—
And the air all about you
Is filled with dirty stench.
There's just one thing that can help
you,
And that is, you can bet—
Is a pipe full of tobacco
Or a good old cigarette.

And you've taken your position
Waiting for the time to come—

When the Boche will make his counter

And it's either stand or run.
There's just one thing can steady
you,

And that is, you can bet—
Is a pipe full of tobacco
Or a good old cigarette.

Or maybe you're in the "Y" hut.
Feeling kind o'blue—
Wishing for the end of your time
Wishing you were thru.
There's just one thing that can help
you,

And that is, you can bet—
Is a pipe full of tobacco
Or a good old cigarette.

Sometimes I sit and wonder
Of the place I went to school—
Where to smoke a cigarette
Was entirely against the rule.
But there's just this consolation
There's no worry or sad regrets—
The good thing about this army is There's no band on cigarett.

—JUNIORS—

A DOUBTFUL HONOR.

He: "I hear your daughter is engaged to be married."

She: "Yes."

He: "Permit me to congratulate you."

She: "I don't know whether or not I should be congratulated. The chap she spicked out is a poet."

—JUNIORS—

We are glad indeed to note the feeling the Juniors at C. I. A. have for us. It is with something more than gladness that we allow our optics to rest upon the question mark following the adjective that describes that feeling. Of course "sisterly love" is all right in its place, but true to expectations, C. I. A. gently hints at more than that!
