

GET READY TO BE HAPPY FOR THE "GLAD GIRL" IS COMING TO TOWN

Get ready to be happy.

Get ready to sunny up a bit.

Pollyanna, the "Glad Girl" is coming to town.

The famous little exponent of optimism will be in this city, Saturday, November 8, matinee and night at the Lyric Theatre.

The "Pollyanna" stories born of the pen of Eleanor H. Porter, of Boston, has brought more happiness into the world than any literature in years. And their dramatization by Catherine Cushing has added to the joy. Pollyanna, herself, is a little girl, the daughter of a minister in a remote rural district. The church of which her father is the pastor is very poor and the family, for existence, has to depend largely on barrels of clothing and provisions sent by the Ladies' Aid Society of a rich city church. It is out of these barrels that Pollyanna has derived all her Christmas presents, although often times the barrels yield only the practical things of life. For instance, Pollyanna once set her heart on becoming the possessor of a doll. She longed to mother a doll. But when the barrel came, instead of what she hoped and prayed for there came, a pair of crutches. And what use had a bright, healthy little girl for crutches? She had use—they served to make her glad that she did not have to use them. That's the spirit of Pollyanna.

AMONG THE COMPANIES

"Fish" Waid Willis seems to have a peculiar desire to visit all rooms on the fourth floor of Leggett when he is in charge. If he fails to put his hardboiled countenance in every room at least every fifteen minutes his fellow "Fish" get worried and believe the Sophs have intercepted their inspection.

Watch Battery B at Waco.

The Infantry birds say they can't help but notice the peculiar walk of all the Artillery Sophs, when they return from "Monkey Drill". Yes, but brother, the Artillery Sophs will notice your walk at the end of our annual hike. Here's to the horses.

Co. G. Infantry went over the top with the highest percentage of subscriptions to the "Bat". This makes four times for Co. G in the last five years. Watch for our special edition.
