

JUNIOR STOCK JUDGING TEAM MAKES TRIP

train. The rest of the bunch agree with him.

The team arrived in Oklahoma City about 6 p. m. and went to a hotel at once. Evidently the Texas bunch were recognized at once for, before the bunch had reached a hotel, "Demflap" Menzies heard some say: Texas, Texas A. and M.! Wonder if they can place 'em right? After cleaning up, the bunch went out to get supper and see the town. Mr. Stangel gave the team a short talk before bedtime and everyone turned in early.

Monday morning the team went to the Stock Yards ready for the contest. There they met the Oklahoma team and Prof. Killdee of Ames, Iowa. Prof. Killdee was the judge of the contest. Mowery, Evans, Mahan, Luker and Snell entered this contest. The contest was over by 6:30 p. m. About 7:30 the standing of the teams were announced. Oklahoma first, Texas second. Although the Texas team had lost, it had three men in the first prize places.

A detailed study of the results showed that after the judging of sheep and cattle the Texas men stood 2nd, 3rd, 4th, 5th, and 6th. Hogs proved their Waterloo.

Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday morning was spent in watching the judging. Tuesday morning Professor Killdee gave the contestants a short talk telling them how and why he placed each class as he did. Tuesday morning was spent in watching the judging of cattle. Tuesday and Wednesday evenings were taken up watching auction sales of cattle. However, time was found for placing a few classes of steers, hogs and sheep.

Aside from seeing every show in Oklahoma City, the bunch had lots of fun. Monday morning Jack woke up hunting for his overcoat. After looking all over the room for it he spied "Overcoat" Evans. Evidently "Overcoat" had gotten cold during the night or had a dream for he had put "Birdseed" Robinson's and Jack Mahan's overcoats on and had thrown "Jew" Mowery's overcoat over his feet. Tuesday morning "Dunlap" Menzies woke up to find his trousers gone. Fortunately he had another pair so; he was spoiled the embarrassment of being without. Jack Mahan came in one night about 12, after having been out to see his girl. He donned his overcoat and started out again. "Birdseed" Robinson asked him where he was going. Mahan's answer he was going to a show. The team has been wondering ever since what kind of a show is open at midnight.

In this little review of the events that happened in Oklahoma City, the supper that Mr. Stangel gave the members of the team cannot be left out. Although the team had lost, Mr. Stangel showed his appreciation of the team by giving the team a supper the night before they left Oklahoma City.

Thursday evening the team left Oklahoma City for Oklahoma A. and M. at Stillwater. The team arrived in Stillwater about 7:30 p. m. The Oklahoma boys showed their appreciation of the Texas team's visit by carrying them to a basket ball game which was being played in their new Gymnasium (and this is some Gym too, believe me).

college over, the college livestock, Friday was spent in looking the and the experiment station. Two classes of horses were judged. Aside from allowing the Texas team to work on their horses, the hospitality shown the Texas team was the greatest possible.

Prof. Blizzard, accompanied by several Animal Husbandry students, showed the team through each division of the college livestock. He also explained the experiments that were being carried out by the college. What the team enjoyed most and was most unexpected by them was a dinner given them by the members of the Horn and Hoof Club.

The team left Stillwater for Perkins about three o'clock Friday evening. There they caught the train for Oklahoma City and from there to Fort Worth. Perkins is a little town about twenty miles from Stillwater. The trip from Stillwater was made in a car. Although the wind was blowing as hard as it ever does in Texas and was much colder. R. C. Mowery won the title of "Windblower" by asking where a "windblowing station was", so the tires could be filled with air.

Mr. Stangel had planned to attend the auction sale of Duroc-Jersey hogs on the farm of Mr. J. J. McClair of Anna, Texas, so, on arrival at Fort Worth, the team took the interurban for Dallas and from there to Anna. After attending the sale, most of the boys returned to Fort Worth and "turned in" early. About (?) a. m. Menzies and Mahan disturbed the other boys slumber by demanding that they be let in. They were just returning from Dallas.

Most of Sunday morning was spent in peaceful slumber. Sunday evening the "bunch" went out to Mr. Charborneans' Percheron Farm and spent a very pleasant as well as instructive evening. Sunday night Mr. Stangel gave the team another little talk and everyone was supposed to be in bed early.

Monday morning the team met at the Stock Yards ready for the contest. Before the contest started, the team met several of the college students and former students. Among them were the members of the International team of this year. Evans, Luker, Menzies, Robinson, and Snell entered this contest. This contest, like the other contest in Oklahoma City was given over to judging in the morning and reasons in the evening. The results of the contest were not heard until late Monday night. Again Texas lost. This time by thirty-six points. C. Luker, by his strategy and hard work, which was only excelled by the strategy of Napoleon, won for himself the honor of being high point man of the contest. "Napoleon" alias C. Luker, justly deserves this honor for he is a consistent as well as a very efficient student judge.

Tuesday was spent in watching the judging of hogs and going through different packing plants. Snell and Mowery, after escaping from the wilds of East Dallas returned safely to College Station Tuesday night. Evans also returned Tuesday night. The others, eventually returned as they were all present at their A. H. class Monday morning, including Prof. Stangel.

The United States Government pays the transportation of each student from the institution to the camp, and return. It pays for the food en route to camp and return.
