

DERE RUMMITT

Oil Can, Oklahoma.
Box "Fore-Won-Nein".

Dear Rufus:

Your delectable concoction of verbal confections arrived in this morning's batch of mail and was opened by my private secretary (who is none other than myself).

It is needless to say that I was more than glad to hear from you, even though you did chide me about wearing your hat so often. Now you know, Rufus, that I wore it only on the "week-end", and down deep in your heart you are cognizant of the fact that I more than appreciate you saving me this "overhead" expense.

Everybody up here in this neck of the woods is strong for the Oklahoma Sooners except me, and I am as weak as seven days in that respect. It did my heart good via my purse (not pulse) when the Nebraska Cornhuskers walked up and down their field as fast as Benny Garrity used to walk post when he was a freshman.

The daily papers, and especially the Oil-Can News Squirt, were so congested with football news last week that their circulation was bad. The Squirt carried a full-size cut of "Hero" McMillan, the famous gridster, and the paper sold like hot cakes to Fred Dinan because, confidentially, these old nestors are fond of the comic section. There were also two long articles concerning the McMillan twain giving an itemized account of the lives of each. It toop up "Bo" McMillan's life history from the time he was big enough to argue that Dallas is a superb of Fort Worth until that historic moment when he crossed the Crimson goal-line spelling victory for Charlie Moran's "praying colons." Then there was a parallel discussion of "Hero" McMillan's escapades from the day he landed at Ellis Island until he crossed Baylor's line for an A. and M. victory.

Say, Rufus, just how much do you think we are going to win from Texas on Thanksgiving? Of course, that depends to some extent on how much they put up.

Drop me a few lines soon.
Your's til Buck Schewitz shaves,
WILLIAM.

P. S.—Does Tucker still wear that polka dot night shirt that he brought from Blum when he was a "first year boy."

"Y" NEWS

Dave Porter, National leader of Student Volunteer work in the colleges will speak at Convocation Sunday. Mr. Porter is one of the ablest speakers in the service today. He has traveled through every mission field in the world and won an enviable name in the World War.

Sunday evening at 6:45 there will be a Union Service in Guion Hall. All denominational groups will combine in order to hear Mr. Porter's address on "The College Student's Relation to Life."

In order that everyone may get a chance to discuss modern problems, Mr. Porter will devote a short period after the evening service to a questionnaire.

During the Student's onference at Hollister the A. and M. band of delegates met and decided to organize at A. and M. a branch of the World Fellowship (Cub. B. Eubank was elected president and C. K. Fraser, secretary-treasurer.

The primary object of this club is to bank together the men interested in missionary work particularly the Student Volunteers.

The Club in connection with the Student Volunteer Band will have charge of the Thursday night meeting once a month at which time missionary subject will be discussed.

They sat upon the garden stile—
The Youthlet and the Maid,
"The stars above are not so bright
As you," he softly said.

She lifted up her little hand
Toward Luna's silvery light;
"The moon above is not so full
As you, my dear, tonight.
