Two young "Kaydets from "Aggie-land," decided to show a couple of Belton girls that they knew more about the "City With a Soul" than was expected of them. The night after the football game that bereft the Baylor Bear of his tail, they stepped out with the ladies of their choice.

After trying to borrow a car without the owner's knowledge and having no success, they decided to "pool" their financial resources and rent a Ford. After persuading the proprietor of a Rent-a-Ford company that all A. and M. "Kaydets" were entitled to a discount on all things while in Waco, they obtained a brand new Ford that looked as if it had served three years on the west front for the trivial sum of $1.20 an hour plus the cost of gas.

After the car had been rolled out into the street and a deposit of $20 into the proprietor's pocket, they discovered that neither knew how to drive an automobile, much less a Ford. One of them having seen an uncle run a steam roller, volunteered to be the pilot. Finally they got the thing started and rambled on in the direction of the Raleigh Hotel where the maidens were awaiting them. With no casualties, except tow traffic cops and a fender, they safely reached their destination.

There they picked up the two girls and started on their evening spin. The two were dressed in their best clothes. One wore a dress and the other wore another dress. As they left the city behind them, the driver discovered he could steer with one hand and keep the car in the road at the same time. In spite of the gentle jerks, that nearly threw them out of the car, they still wended their way blissfully along. While they were going along at the breakneck pace of 25 miles per, they were interrupted by a fearful noise that seemed to issue from the rear of the car.

The car came to a halt and all sat frozen in their seats for a moment. Placing their arms back in the positions that they should naturally assume, they took themselves out of the car and into the road to ascertain the cause of the trouble that was delaying their forward progress. To their disgust one of the front tires was "blown out." Their search for tools with which to repair the casing was futile. One of the "Kaydets", on glancing at his imported (from Kress) watch saw that it was only an hour and a half until the train on which the girls were to leave for Belton was due.

They were stranded eight miles from Waco out on a country road, foodless, "spiritless," and tireless. They were in a situation as only an Aggie can get out of with a show of delicacy. After nearly an hour of impatient waiting and rolling the flat tire to various houses along the road to get it repaired and finding no one at home, they finally espied another of the road lizard species approaching. They flagged it with one of the red handkerchiefs that had helped so much to show up the "T" for ????? the afternoon of that night.

A few minutes of breathless work, the tire was fixed, the girls were on their way to the station. At the railroad terminal they were loaded bag and baggage on their train. Then came a wild rush for the twenty dollars. After the proprietor had been overcome by a hot line, the "Kaydets" received $16.70 and a receipt for $4.05 deducting the sum of 75 cents for unavoidable delay.

THANKSGIVING HOP TWO WEEKS OFF

Attendance Should Exceed That of Any Previous Dance.

Two weeks more and the Campus will be alive with visitors for the game and Hop. With the game as a special drawing card, this year's Thanksgiving dances should be the largest ever given at College.

Ligon Smith's Orchestra of ten pieces has been engaged to furnish the jazz and it can and certainly will put out that best inspiration of the shuffle. The committees in charge have formulated plans for two big dances. The first will be given Friday night in the main Mess Hall in honor of the football team; the second will probably be in the Mess Hall Annex.
