I call therefore a complete and general education that which fits a man to perform justly, skillfully and magnanimously all the offices, both private and public, of peace and war.—Milton.

This is a special edition of The Battalion issued for the purpose of reminding Aggies and prospective Aggies, whose minds are now dull by the obscurity of the dog days, of the great times that await them in the student associations of the future year at A. and M. College, and of the inestimable opportunities that will open to them to prepare for the play upon life's stage.

A. & M. ATTRACTS BY SERVICE.

There is everything to encourage every old man to return to A. and M. this year with new plans and greater aspirations. The strides by which A. and M. is advancing into a place of efficiency far above that of any similar institution in the world are getting longer every year. More recognition is paid to it every year and this is won only on merit. A. and M. has never had any clintele but those who have felt the power of its influence, and that fortunate blessing has advanced it slowly and by degrees of surety. In the administration of its affairs it has been directed only by the saneness of an educated mind, free from the danger of partisanship and prejudice. To this unprejudiced mind of administration also belongs credit for the fact that the institution has been kept open to the "sons of toil" and its name has never been smirched by demagogic catering to superficialities.

It is a practical institution teaching the things that assist men to better conditions in the world, develop its resources into liquid wealth and advance its citizenship. After forty-seven years of strict adherence to that ideal it now has the support of a great body of practical minded men, keenly appreciative of its worth to the state and in this great support the students of the college have reason for great pride. This growing body of friends of the institution alone has been the source of the constantly increasing student body, has been the reason for the rapidly growing esteem in which the college is held and to these friends is due greatest credit for the ability of the present student body to stand with pride in scholastic and athletic competition among all other institutions.

Pat Olsen has joined the Des Moines, Iowa, club of the Western League as a pitcher. Pat has hard luck but has been pitching good ball. He reported immediately after the close of school.
