THE IKE ASHBURN WAY.

(From the Dallas Times-Herald.)

The tumult and the shouting die. football crowds depart. ly the goal posts shiver in the winter wind. The "season" is over. Which reminds us that in schools there should be a season for other things than football. A season of study, a season of preparing for a game harder than any gridiron grapple, a season of preparing for the game

Down at the Agricultural and Mechanical College of Texas the students, it appears, are not unmidful of the value that comes from such a seasoning, are willing to work hard in order to reap the advantages of such a seasoning. There are some 2,200 students at A. and M.; do you know that 800 of these are working their way through college? That's pretty fine, isn't it? That shows the students of A. and M., full of college spirit as they are, don't think a touchdown the summum bonum of education. Here's a little story of one of these students as told by Mr. Ewing Mosely, former president of the Dallas County Ex-Students' club, the Dallas County Ex-Students' club, a very timely story showing that there are college students who, though they are neither dashing halfbacks nor pass smashing ends, yet win for themselves—and for their college—victories finer than those achieved on football fields: Came to A. and M. a student who streve to win his way through colstrove to win his way through college by waiting on the table. It was noticed at night that he was not in the dormitory. Ike Ashburn, commandant, went out on a still hunt for him. He found the lad living in a very nicely and several subjects reand off pup tent canned "You can't live out here," said Ike, "you'll freeze." "I have been living out here and I haven't frozen yet," the young fellow sturdily answered.

But Ike wouldn't sand for his staying there. So in what they call the Ike Ashburn way of helpfulness he got some lumber and out of that lumber the lad constructed a shack There he slept of nights but so diligently did he study during the day that he won high honors in his class Off for the oil fields he was in the summer. There he worked and he saved, so that when he returned to college he paid debts he had necessarily accumulated during the col-lege year and had a little left over for sticking in the bank.

There are others down at A. and
M. like him, Mr. Moseley tells us. One youth arrived at College Station with three cows and throughout the year helped pay for his "schooling" with their milk, he doing the milking. Who shall say that youths like these are not a high honor to the State? Who shall say that a State educational institution which encourages that spirit is not a high asset of the State?

ating to marketing of farm products, Extension Service, made a very interisting talk on the Farm Bureau. He told of the origin and work of this movement and the rapid progress it has recently made. Marketing facilities in Texas have almost come up to par with those of California which have been elaborately developed.

The president of the club, A. E. Forester, made the first of a series of talks on Parliamentary Law. Dr. Buechel, Dr. Lee, and Prof. Leland each rendered criticisms of the program procedure and offered sugges-tions for the betterment of the society in the future. After a few informal discussions, motion to adjourn was carreid.
