SENIOR CIVIL ENGINEERS HONORED

Representatives of the Gong Telephone Co. have paid a high tribute to the C. E. Dept. and to our classmates, Messrs. Pinson and Sherman, in selecting them as especially suitable material for development by their company. In speaking of the matter, Mr. Pinson is quoted as saying, "This is the highest honor that has been bestowed upon me since I was made honorary nozzle bearer of the Forney Fire Dept." Sherman has issued the following statement for publication, "Never since my Fish days, when I was ex-officio bearer of the Flaming Recepticle, have I been imbued with so deep a sense of responsibility. I am glad to be a credit to my institution."

Several theories have been advanced as to why these two men have been selected from a class of several hundred. One of the most plausible is that because of the unusual elastic properties of Mr. Pinson's nose, which may be flattened at will, he is especially qualified to inspect wood pecker holes and other cavities which from time to time develop in the company's poles. Another theory which is given a good deal of credence is that Pinson having acquired the cognomen of "The Forney Bull-Dog," while on the Aggie football squad, the company wishes to tether him out at night so that he may safeguard their more valuable poles. With these theories in mind, and remembering the fact that Mr. Pinson is especially designed to climb poles of exceptional size, we can readily see why an enterprising company like the Gong, has selected him.

While Mr. Sherman lacks many of the above qualifications, he has others which especially fit him for the service. It has been suggested that the company has learned of his powerful suction and intends to use him for drawing wires through underground conduits. While this will throw many ferrets out of work, the theory of "The greatest good for the greatest number" must be maintained. It may also be found practicable to draw the copper wire directly from the ore by means of the suction. This will greatly reduce the cost of Gong service. Still another theory is that because of his highly developed and extraordinary resistant knees, Mr. Sherman can be developed into a very efficient pole climber.

But whatever may be the mark of distinction, their classmates wish them ever success in their chosen profession. Mr. Sherman hails from the shadows of the Amicable Bldg., while Mr. Pinson comes from the hay fields of Forney.—Friends, "Bum Voyage!"

APPEALS FOR AID TO STUDENTS IN EUROPE

Mr. Hester Recites Interesting Story Of Hardships in European Countries

C. Floyd Hester, director of the southwest area of the United States for the Student Friendship Fund, spoke last night in the assembly hall in the interest of the world-wide movement to aid the most needy students of Central Europe, Russia, and the Near East. He told an interesting story of the plight of students in the European countries, speaking after four years of experience in Siberia, North China, and Russia, as well as the principal university centers of Europe. The speaker himself is an alumnus of Weslegan Methodist College of New York, Oberlerlin College in Ohio, and the University of Wisconsin.

"The local campaigns form part of not only a nation-wide, but a world-wide movement to aid the most needy of the students and professors in Central Europe, Russia, and the Near East," Mr. Hester said. The universities of Missouri, Arkansas and Texas, are making arrangements to hold their campaigns this month.

During the last three years over $1,500,000 has been distributed through the European Student Relief or Student Friendship Fund as it is called in America. Aid has been given to 105,000 students in 200 institutions scattered through 19 different European countries. Meals numbering 22,234,345 have been served. Medical aid has been given, clothing has been distributed and student enterprises have been developed, such as laundries, book binderies, shoe repair shops.

"Not only is the help brought to the destitute students important, but equally so, is the spirit of friendship and good will, that goes with the help and has already spread to students of many lands, giving promise of a hopeful future," said Mr. Hester.

The Dog in the Manger.

One day a Pekinese took a nap in the Manger of an Ox. When the Ox came home for Supper the Dog, enraged at being disturbed, snarled, barked, and attempted to bite the Ox.

Whereupon the Noble Animal took one peek at the Peke, horned in and knocked him for a Tin of Spratt's Biscuits through the Barn Door.

Moral:

A Dog is entitled to the Mange, but the Ox must have his Manger.
