

T. C. U. INVADES AGGIELAND FRIDAY

Friday afternoon, Matty Bell's strong T. C. U. aggregation will invade Kyle Field in an attempt to down the Fighting Farmers in the first game between these two institutions since the Christians were admitted to the conference. They will meet a Farmer team enraged by the defeat handed to them by the Baylor Bears the week before; a team that is expected to fight as they have never fought before.

On the other hand, the Horned Frogs from Ft. Worth are fresh from their game with Coach Morrison's Mustangs; a team which they completely outplayed, according to those who witnessed the contest, but who were defeated by a break—a fumble of a punt, that was picked up by Gene Bedford, who ran the short distance for a touchdown. They flashed a defense against the brilliant S. M. U. passing attack that was impenetrable. This is evidenced by the fact that Stoltenwerck was only able to complete 2 out of the dozen or so they attempted many of them being intercepted.

They have been defeated twice this season but as other schools, they will put up the stiffest fight of the season against the Aggies Friday. It is up to us to match and excel them in this fight in order to win from them. We must win, men, for we cannot lose another game this season.

GIVE HIM HIS FLOWERS.

By Foster F. Breazeale, '28.

Let's give a man his flowers while here on earth

And let him enjoy his good qualities for all they are worth.

Why wait 'til he is stiffened and lowered in the clay,

Before we begin to laud his fame forever and aye.

Hand him his flowers and let him enjoy them here,

Then the darkness will vanish and the sky will be clear,

His spirits will be lifted and he will have pep in his walk

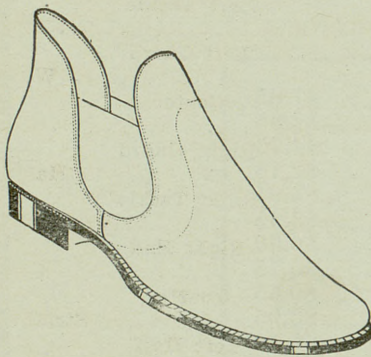

And when he meets a stranger he will have courage to talk.

So let's give him his flowers—leave out all the bad,

He will be cheerful and happy and not half as sad;

For just a word of praise added to a fellow's name

Will straighten out the wrinkles and march him on to fame.

FRESHMEN GIVE IMPRESSIVE DRILL AT BAYLOR GAME

Calisthenics Drill Well Received by Attending Thousands at Cotton Palace Contest.

The calisthenics drill by the Aggie Freshmen at the Cotton Palace prior to the game with Baylor Saturday, far surpassed any similar performance that has ever been attempted by the A. and M. cadets. All precedents were disregarded and several improvements and innovations were introduced.

Heretofore, the entire corps has participated in the drill, and as the upper classmen were given scant opportunity to review the exercises, they naturally lowered the effectiveness of the exhibition, whereas the Freshmen, after drilling three times a week since the beginning of school, were far superior in the execution of the drill. For this reason, and also because of the increasing size of the corps, it was decided that this year the Freshmen alone would be used in the drill. The wisdom of this decision was manifested when the exhibition proved to be the best ever staged by A. and M.

One of the most pleasing improvements over former years was that the cadets lined up behind the bleachers instead of on the field. The confusion attendant to falling in a large body of men could not help but make a poor impression at the very start of the exhibition. A further advantage of this feature was that the blouses, caps and Sam Brownes were removed before entering the field, which allowed the Freshmen to make their initial appearance an impressive one by virtue of their striking conspicuousness, the result of the white shirts. The band played a march as the two battalions swung around the gridiron and into place, and the entrance of the colors escorted by the guidons was a signal for wild applause from the spectators.

Instead of receiving their orders by word of mouth, as usual, the Freshmen executed the exercises by means of a signal gun. The sudden crack of the pistol, followed instantly by a simultaneous roar as the cadets counted out the cadence of the difficult movements, added much to the impressiveness of the drill.

Without a doubt it was the most flawless and most spectacular calisthenics exhibition that A. and M. men ever staged. The spectators were unstinted in their praise of the drill, and frequently interrupted the proceedings with their applause. All credit for the unprecedented success is due to Captain Ware, and the Fish are to be congratulated for the support they accorded their instructor.

That famous Aggie "T" was formed between halves and was more than its usual success. Campus people who saw the demonstration from the viewpoint of the stands say that, although it was a trifle unsymmetrical, the "T" was formed quicker and with less confusion than ever before and that not a hand went up at the wrong time; not an off color handkerchief appeared; and that the cadence of the yells were well nigh perfect. Nothing at all happened to mar the effectiveness of one of the most perfect "T's" the Aggies have ever formed.

THE DOPE BUCKET BY "BILL"

As a result of the game in Waco Saturday, the Aggies are at the bottom of the percentage column in terms of games won and lost. But the race is not over yet, and remember, church is not out until the last hymn is sung. All of the undefeated teams in the conference still have several hard games to fight before the season is over. Baylor has Texas U., S. M. U., and Rice to play, meeting the Longhorns in Austin next Saturday; S. M. U. in Dallas the following week, and the Rice Owls in Houston on Thanksgiving Day.

S. M. U. still has the Arkansas Razorbacks (one of the strongest teams in the conference), Baylor, and the Oklahoma Aggies left on their card, while Coach Heisman of Rice has Austin College, Baylor, and the Texas Aggies yet to encounter.

The Aggies can certainly put the rest of the conference in a muddle by winning the rest of the games, providing of course that certain other teams come through with victories. Of course, we regret losing the game with Baylor, for a victory would have partially settled the grudge we have been carrying for two years, magnified by the tie score of last year. However, there are other little matters to be attended to in the course of the next month. We have a little dispute to settle with Rice on Kyle Field, and then there is Matty Bell's strong team from T. C. U. to conquer and as the grand finale of the season, the last and most important, are the dedicatory exercises that are to be held in the new stadium at Austin on Turkey Day.

Fay Wilson and Ralph Pittman, the foremost punting artists in the conference, each vied for kicking honors in the game in Waco last Saturday. The famous Aggie half back distinctly had the edge on his opponent throughout the encounter with one exception—a 10-yard boot. The rest of them outdistanced those of the Baylor captain, those of the 40 and 45-yard variety coming with surprising regularity. It might be stated that out of 49 attempts this season this is the only one that he has failed to get at least 25 yards out of. The average in the Aggie offensive shows him to still have an average of 44.4 yards for the season.

By out punting his opponent last Saturday, together with his running and plunging attack, the brilliant Farmer won his place on the Southwest's mythical eleven. For in addition to being a punter deluxe, he can pass, hit the line, skirt the end, and is a splendid defensive player.

Waugh, the giant tackle, and Allison the brilliant Farmer wingman, also practically cinched their berths on the all-Southwestern aggregation by the crashing game they played against the Bears.

Waugh, acting captain of the team, covered himself with glory by his furious, slashing style of play in the Aggie line. It was he that could be seen in practically every play, and the manner in which he continually broke thru the Baylor defense and tackling the runners behind the line of scrimmage furnished some of the many thrills of the game. Allison upheld his reputation of being the best defensive end in the conference by his brilliant work before the record-breaking crowd that packed the Cotton Palace Stadium.

Meitzen, playing his first conference game, performed like a veteran. Although pitted against probably the best center in the conference, Bear Walker, he handled the pivot position to a perfection. His defensive game was particularly good, making many tackles and recovering Coffey's fumble of Wilson's punt on Baylor's 20-yard line.

Clem Pinson saw service in the game against Baylor and his defensive play bordered on the spectacular. He is rapidly hitting his stride at the half back position.
