Aggieland, Dec. 16, 1924.

Dere Rummit:

I don't know whether you know it or not, but when the ducks and geese are on the wing to the great Southland, when big business men are on the water-wagon, and when all the kids are on their best behavior—well that means Xmas. And, if like me, you remember taking stock at last New Year's and finding that your entire capital amounted to zero minus, then you know Xmas means PRESENTS, varied and assorted, bust mostly galore. Then into your mind flashes visions of the dazzling beauties of your world and the tenderest memories flit through your cranium like flies flitting through the open doors of the down town eating houses. And that's why this pile of feminine photographs are before me.

I think I should have come to bury the beauties, not to praise them. Now here's Zal Lee—at first I was afraid she wouldn't marry me and then I was afraid she would; and Anita, great squashes how she could park the "malted"; and here's Minnehoho, the only admirable feature about her was her absence; and ah! the little dark-eyed Marcheta, but what a trust she created between the hamburger men and my poor pocket-book. And a lot of the others I met and fell in love with one night and forgot the next afternoon. But what a collection—why Tom, if they all had meant something I might be calling the Man of a Thousand Romances. Let it not be thus.

And I wonder what they are all going to give me. Now Billie could give me a nice sporty tie, and Nellie a smoking set, and Rua one of those sporty refers, and Tiddlewinks a nice new pair of shoes—now wouldn't that be soothing? But the reaction, what shall I gladden their young hearts with? My gift list must not exceed twenty. Ah! now I have it—I'll give Ponjola, the favored one, one of those gorgeous special Woolworth's one-cent Christmas cards and THE OTHER NINETEEN DITTO. That's twenty cents, unheard-of extravagance, but my soul and conscience will be AT EASE.

Yours for longer hours (sleeping hours I mean),

LES.

Y. M. C. A. TO ENTERTAIN STUDENTS DURING CHRISTMAS HOLIDAYS

The Y. M. C. A. is making arrangements for the entertainment of those students who will remain on the campus during the approaching holidays. Reverend Matthews is waiting, however, on the list of names of those students who will be at College so that he can make definite plans.

A large Christmas tree, fully and fittingly decorated, and beautifully lighted, will be placed in the lobby of the Y. M. C. A., and a special Christmas program will be given in the assembly hall on Christmas Eve.

Several parties are being planned for the holidays, too, which will be held in the "Y". It is the desire of the Y. M. C. A. officials to help the students who are not going home for the holidays in having a jolly and spirited time.

"Have you ever been married," asked the judge.

"Ye-es," stammered the prisoner.

"To whom?"

"A woman."

"Of course it was a woman," snapped the judge, "did you ever hear of anyone marrying a man?"

"Yes sir," said the prisoner brightening, "my sister did."

Whereupon he got life.
