

OKLA. A. AND M. TO INVADE AGGIELAND FOR GAMES FRIDAY AND SATURDAY

On Friday and Saturday nights, the Aggies of Oklahoma will invade the Aggieland of Texas in hopes of annexing two basketball games to their unbroken string of victories. Coach John Maulbetsch's team will come to College Station fresh from their two victories over the Longhorns, the first game being won by an overwhelming score of 46 to 10. The second was annexed with a 25 to 15 count. By virtue of these two defeats, the team from the University received a severe setback in the conference race.

The proteges of Coach Dana Bible will go into the week-end series as dark horses, the dope being against them. However they will be playing on their home court; on one of the largest playing fields in the conference. Then there will be the student body to back them up in their battles. So when the dopesters begin to forecast the results of the games they must take into consideration these facts and with the proverbial Bucket belonging to Old Man Dope continuing to be upset in the pennant chases in the Southwest Conference, an attempt to pick a winner in these matches will necessitate overlooking several things.

If the Oklahoma aggregation by some chance, manage to put over a couple of wins, they will loom up as the winners of their first championship in a major sport in this loop and it will be their last chance for accomplishing this feat as they will withdraw at the close of the year and become members on the Missouri Valley Conference. Only one more really dangerous opponent will be met this season and that will be with the Arkansas Razorbacks at the close of the season.

Should the Texas Aggies put over a pair of victories, then they will stand out as probable winners in this circuit for most of the remaining games will be played on the court in the new gym. However, there are two games with the Arkansas University team in Fayetteville.

PASSING SHOW

IS THE WINTER
GARDEN REVERIE

Not in recent memory has there been quite so much theatrical interest displayed as toward the 11th annual "Passing Show" headed for the Palace Theatre, Bryan, Friday.

This gigantic musical spectacle has just completed a smashing run at the New York Winter Garden, Chicago, Philadelphia and Boston.

Some idea of the massive scenic production may be gained when it is known that there are twenty-eight complete scenes in two tremendous acts.

You will marvel at the beauty and art, and be astonished that one revue could hold so much players, but there is the very program of principals in addition to the well liked Gorgie Price, Margaret Breen and Roy Cummings: Wm. Pringle, Vera Ross, Perry Askam, Jan Moore, Louis Blakeley, James Hamilton, Ann Lowenworth, Edgar Atchisly Ely, Irene Shaw, Jack Hall, Bob Gilbert, Jack Rice, Francis Mahoney, David Breen, and Frank Breen.

Think of this attractive list of names and then think of the most beautiful group of girls in the most lavish costumes you have ever seen on the stage and you will have some idea of what you may expect when you see the glorious Revue of ever changing scenes and thoughts. 40 girls, all under 20 years in the the chorus featuring the living Chandilcer and the Castle House Orchestra. Not only the biggest show ever presented but the biggest to make a town.

"Itch" Johnson won't tell the joke on himself, but ask Gurinsky why "Itch's" friends have gone to calling him "Hair Tonic."

Neely Allison also suffered a relapse while at a show the other day. One of the girls, after her main act, was encored, whereupon she singled out Allison and began singing to him: "Oh! you don't know how I need a home and a baby."
