PARENTS DAY SUCCESS-FUL IN EVERY RESPECT

men marched into the hall for the formal Sunday morning convocation service, which, this day, paramounted the theme of motherhood. By instrumental and vocal music, and word of address and prayer, the virtues of motherhood and the sweetness of home were impressed on the hearers. Many age-old hymns which eulogize the world-old admiration for maternal parenthood, were sung and played by a chorus of A. and M. College students, the College orchestra, feminine duets, trios, and choruses, and most thrilling and impressive of all, several numbers rendered by the famous child prodigy, Kennedy Orr, of Fort Worth. He was ably accompanied on the piano by Miss Roberta Dedmon, also of Fort Worth.

The feature address of the day was delivered by Mrs. A. R. Rucks of Angleton, on the subject, "The American Home," which was pertinent to the theme of the morning service. Mrs. Rucks said that "in our mad manner of living, our inevitable haste, our short cuts to achievement, and our careless manner of living that the American home was apt to become just a stopping place." She further said: "It takes a heap 'o lovin' in a house to make a home", so the poet tells us, and we agree most heartily with the statement, but are we of America today engaged in real home building? What is home? Not the walls that surround it; not the roof that covers it; not the furniture that fills it, and not the windows which let the sunshine in. You can no more measure it by inches or weigh it by ounces, than you can set the boundaries of a summer breeze or calculate the fragrance of a rose. Home is the love that is in it. It might be by the fireside where the dancing flames cast magic, fleeting pictures, seen only by children; it may be by a study table filled with books and a reading lamp, or upstairs by a south window and a sewing basket, or it may be in a child's play room in a doll house, or it may be in a kitchen whose floor is worn white with the hard work of years."

Sunday afternoon the guests were informally received in the Y. M. C. A. and in the Assembly Hall, where the A. and M. College band gave a splendid concert of sacred and popular music. Sunday evening the visiting mothers and fathers went to the various denominational religious services with their sons. Monday was spent in acquainting the parents with the College plant. They were welcomed to the classrooms with their sons and were given an opportunity to know the men who now take the place of teacher that mother first held many years ago. In the afternoon the mothers were guests of President and Mrs. W. B. Bizzell at a lawn reception, and afterward the entire corps of cadets paraded in honor of the visitors.
