JOHN TARLETON TRANSFERS MADE SERGEANTS

school here and have been treated as if they were only high school graduates—then in the next year they received their cadet commissions and were considered to be members of the Senior class. This is a very undesirable condition since it did not allow these men to more than get acquainted with the Freshman class before they became Seniors.

The granting of these sergeantships should be a great help to the "junior-fish" in obtaining recognition from the Juniors as classmates during their first year here rather than postponing it to the last year. These men have all had as much military training as our Juniors and some have had even more, so there is no doubt as to their ability or right to hold the position that their promotion entitles them to. As far as is known, Texas A. and M. and the two government schools at West Point and Annapolis are the only institutions that require men entering them from another college to serve an entire year as a "fish."

We are glad to see these men enter A. and M. and we hope that some plan will be devised whereby their social status will be determined on a more desirable scale, even if they are not placed exactly on the same plane with the Juniors.

The Seminole Indians in Florida lost very little in the storm, and for a very good reason.

At the special session of the Thirtieth legislature Governor Ferguson asked payment of deficiencies amounting to $1,536,066.17 granted by herself and said that because on September 1, 1926, there was to the credit of the general revenue fund over seven and a half million dollars that these deficiencies could be paid without any inconvenience to the treasury.

She explained how the deficiencies were incurred and attached an itemized statement of the deficiencies.

Among the items were $123,180 for Texas Technological College; $100,000 for the University of Texas summer school; $45,000 for the College of Industrial Arts; $116,000 for the State Teachers College; and $96,000 for extra needs at Texas A. and M.

YELLING STAFF ORGANIZED

The yelling staff is now completely organized with Jake Langford, elected yell leader near the close of school last year, as its capable general. He has picked as his assistants Bob Oaks of Dallas, a veteran of two years' experience as yell leader. Allan Peoples of Dallas, and "Bugs" Warren of Houston, are new at the business of directing the fighting spirit of the Farmers, but they both showed that they were there with the old power when they made their initial appearance on College Night.

Couldn't Be

Capper's Weekly: "Darling, what in the world is the matter with this lettuce?" asked the young husband of three days. "Didn't you wash it?"

"Of course I did, dear. I even used that good perfumed soap on it."

The only kind of man we envy is the one who can be popular without having to lend money.
