

UNIVERSITY WILL FLOAT AGAIN

So successful is the floating university idea, the Cunard Line announces, that the Aurania has been chartered to leave New York September 21, 1927 with the second floating student body. The usual undergraduate courses of study will be offered and emphasis will be given on courses suitable for graduates of secondary schools whose parents wish to give them a year before entering college or business.

LOVE

(The lover has one lucid moment)

A passion strange, in many a guise,
Is that which men call love;
A little, hard, death-dealing fist
Encased in a velvet glove;
A game of chance from life to death,
Devoid of reason or rules,
Where the dice change fools to wise

men—

More often—make wise men fools.
A sudden, compelling obsession,
A lust with a semblance divine;
A gay exhilaration
Like the born of rare, old wine;
An hour of the blindest folly,
With years of vain regret;
A dream, nightmare, and awakening!
And yet, dear girl, and yet—
(And then the loved one speaks)

There! I knew you didn't love me!
I know you don't! It's true!
Or you would never say
These awful things you do!
(And the lucid moment is over—
The lover's off in a haze again.)
Sweet, sweet, 'twas only said in fun!
Love you, dear? I'll love you
As long as sun is sun!
Don't pout. Don't turn your lips away.
Come! Kiss me in the same sweet way

You always have; for I was foolish
When I spoke before. I promise you
I'll not be foolish any more.
And love—our love—forevermore—
(And so on, far into the night.)

Phil Frank: "I asked if I might see her home."

Ben: "What did she say?"

P. F.: "She promised to send me a picture of it."

He: Do you think it's nice to sneak off into a dark corner and read risqué jokes?

She Naw! It's too hard on your eyes.
Exchange.
