

accurate, the Aggies receiving committee has the edge over the Ponies and this leaves room for a great game of chance next Saturday.

Teams Are Physically Fit

The Aggies will have the advantage in that their players are in better physical condition than the Ponies. The "Four Horse men" of the Aggie team, Hunt, Conover, Varnell and Burgess, will be ready for the fray and all of the linemen will be ready. S. M. U. will have all of their men ready but the effects of the game last Saturday will show up to a certain extent. The Aggie reserve strength is superior to that of S. M. U. but this is not likely to affect the game as it will be a free for all aerial affair.

and this dual meet with Texas will give the fans a chance to compare the Aggies with one of their strongest rivals.

Friday's game with Tech saw some of the Aggie players display the form that made them famous in high school. Pinky Alsabrook played the greatest game of his college career.

Big Mortellra put up a great defensive game at backing up the line. Watching him in action reminds one of a great half-back from Brazos County who recently played with S. M. U.

Be on hand early gang and let's whip those Mustangs and the Longhorns.

Co-Ed Graduates Are Altar Shy
 Statistics show that British university women graduates do not marry readily, as only one in twenty of the women who have gone through colleges in the past seven years is married now. Asked why, many of them say that education has led them to demand more in a man than they are able to find, and that men are afraid of educated women.
