

The past three months may have been vacation time for many of the students and profs, but it was just three more months to Mr. Sullivan, Business Manager of Athletics, and what a three months. Sully was never in one place more than one minute.

He had to show the carpenters, house movers, ditch diggers, concrete men and everyone how to make greater speed. Sully was also a road builder the past summer. The old road ran under the stadium and had to be moved further east. In a way it was a vacation for him also, since he is completing a work that has been a dream for many years. By Thanksgiving many of the visions of this man will become realities at Kyle Field. He will have enough seats to accomodate everyone for the Mustang game and about 38,000 seats for the Texas affray.

CROSS-COUNTRY TEAM AT WORK

Aggies Point to S. W. C. Championship.

The fall of 1929 once more finds the Texas Aggies looking over the hill towards another Southwestern Conference cross-country championship. For the third consecutive year the Aggies find themselves with a wealth of material available with which to mold a prize winning harrier combination.

Led by "Warhorse" Cy Shoemaker, the team already is swinging into the long training grind. "Dick" Winders, last year's conference winner in the distance; J. B. Michael, capable mile, half-mile, and cross-country man; "Ed" Thompson, track captain for this year; and "Meal Hound" Perkins, fleet squadman of last year, are among those who have donned the spiked shoe and have felt the dust of the college byways beneath their feet. All of the above except Thompson and Perkins are lettermen of last year. Thompson lettered in cross-country in 1927, while Perkins was kept from the conference chase last fall by an attack of the flu.

In 1927 the Aggies copped the conference meet with ease, running away with the race at Dallas. Last Fall Rice and A. and M. ended in a tie for the title, and the Aggies won the toss-up.

Several other squadmen of last year and a goodly number of prospects from the recent freshmen class will arrive within a few days to make their bids for positions on the team.

Seven men make up a cross-country squad, while five men actually count. The man finishing first is given one point, the second man two points, the third man three points, and so on until five men from every team have finished. The team with the lowest total score for the five is adjudged the winner. However, the sixth and seventh men of each team may aid in the scoring by finishing before some of the five men of the other teams.

Two dual meets and the conference meet have been scheduled for this year. The dual affairs will be with Texas University and Rice Institute.

The starting Aggie backfield will average about 168 pounds.
